

THE ALMIGHTY LORD CASPIAN

The Almighty Lord Caspian

Chapter 821 Escape

Even though Byron had only experienced the aftershocks, he was now shaken to the core. The once luxurious King of Filren's residence had turned into a mess amidst the explosion. Byron was so furious that he trembled all over and pulled out his gun before firing it into the air.

"Caspian, I'll definitely torture you horribly!"

At this moment, on a hillside, Caspian was watching everything happening in Byron's residence from afar. He had already left the residence quietly with tens of thousands of his subordinates. "Lord Caspian! Those fools from Filren were completely fooled by you!" Laina exclaimed admiringly.

This was the first time she had fought side-by-side with Caspian. She hadn't expected his tactics in leading troops to be so sharp. Such a way of warfare couldn't be achieved by an ordinary commander.

Laina had long heard of Caspian's title as the Diatoranian God of War. In her opinion, he should command the overall situation in the main base rather than lead troops into battle.

But now, it seemed that Caspian's intelligence and decision-making were both exceptional. He had completely outplayed the enemy.

"They're just too stupid. | only used a few tricks, and they fell for them," Caspian said calmly. "Lord Caspian, why do you understand the King of Filren so well? Are you familiar with him?" Laina asked, puzzled.

"A fool like him is not worthy of my attention! | can see his flaws just from his decisions and actions. Hence, dealing with him is a piece of cake," Caspian explained.

Hearing this, Laina nodded in agreement as she found his words logical. These insights could only be grasped by someone with extensive experience in battles. Obviously, Caspian had achieved this.

Laina looked at Caspian with admiration. Although she was a few years younger than him, she was already an adult, and her heart had long been restless.

Caspian also noticed her passionate gaze, but he had long been used to it. After all, he had so many women around him.

Previously, Caspian had felt something amiss with Macy when she hinted at her feelings. Though he knew her intentions, he could only pretend not to notice. After all, he was a married man.

Now, he didn't know how to handle Laina's affectionate glances at him.

He wasn't the kind of man who would cheat. Since he had chosen Willow, he would continue to treat her well. Caspian could control his emotions, but he couldn't resist the infatuation of these young women around him. "We can't contact Diatoran now. Someone must deliver the message." He quickly changed the subject. "Okay, I'll immediately rush to send the news out," Laina answered immediately.

"Sylvia and the others hesitate to launch a full-scale attack because they think I'm still there. As long as she knows I'm safe, I believe Sylvia will make the right choice," Caspian said.

The secret passage would be discovered sooner or later, so they weren't completely safe now. But as long as Sylvia captured the capital of Filren within a short period, all their problems would be solved.

Laina quickly spread the news.

Upon learning that Caspian was safe, Sylvia had no more reservations and prepared to take down the capital in one fell swoop.

On the other hand, Macy was still lurking in the capital of Filren. Her mission was to catch Byron. She simply disguised herself and infiltrated Filren's guards. They were already short of manpower, so no one suspected Macy.

"King Byron, we can't hold on much longer. There are too many enemies. I'll lead them away while you guys hurry and leave with His Majesty!" Kenelm said urgently.

Afterward, he rushed out with some guards, deliberately firing randomly to attract Sylvia's attention. Macy and a few other guards protected Byron closely as they slowly retreated.

She walked to the back. When nobody was paying attention, she shot the other guards!

Gunshots were echoing everywhere, so nobody knew it was Macy's doing.

Byron was at a loss and could only follow Macy as she was the one left by his side.

"Your Majesty, I think it's too dangerous to rush out like this. It's better for us to hide in the residence. That way, we'll still have a chance to live," Macy advised.

Byron had been scared out of his wits long ago and completely followed her advice. "Okay, lead me out of here. Let's hide in the residence!" Byron said anxiously.

With gunfire everywhere, he felt extremely insecure.

"You guys, find a way to distract the enemy. I'll protect His Majesty!" Macy shouted to the other guards. She needed to disperse everyone before dealing with Byron.

Macy did this for a reason. She had learned that Caspian had left

King's residence through the secret tunnel, she hadn't figured out the location of the passage yet. Please read the original content at .

Originally, she wanted to kill Byron directly. But after some thought, she decided she could capture him alive.

As long as she entered the residence, she would have a chance to kill him. Then, she would have made a great achievement in handing Byron over to Caspian. Please read the original content at .

As Macy fled with Byron, there were several times she was ready to capture him. She had some skills.

Without a guaranteed victory, she didn't dare to act rashly. Otherwise, she would ruin her plan.

Macy led Byron into the residence and into the basement amidst the ruins, where there was actually a secret passage. Even he was stunned to see this.

He had no idea at all when this secret passage was added.

Without any hesitation, Byron entered the secret passage, thinking it was left by Camden.

"A bunch of idiots! There's a secret passage, but nobody told me about it!" Byron scolded angrily when he saw the footprints on the ground.

He thought his subordinates had quietly left through here.

Since there was a secret passage, his hope of survival increased a bit. This made Byron excited.

Yet, the moment he stepped out of the passage, he froze in place.

There were so many people outside pointing their guns at him.

"You fools! Do you know who I am? How dare you point guns at me!" Byron immediately shouted in anger.

He hadn't yet seen clearly who was standing outside.

The Almighty Lord Caspian

Chapter 822 Alliance

Caspian's subordinates were all waiting outside. They didn't expect anyone to come out of the secret passage. Moreover, Byron was dressed in ordinary clothes, so they didn't recognize him. "Can't you see that this is the King of Filren?" Macy shouted immediately.

Upon hearing this, the people outside were momentarily stunned. Then, they immediately pulled the trigger. At this moment, Byron realized something was wrong. These people didn't seem to be his subordinates.

It wasn't until now that he understood why so many of Caspian's subordinates could vanish without a trace. It turned out that Caspian and his soldiers had escaped through this secret passage. Byron was furious when he realized this.

If he had known earlier, he would've let Jason search the mansion thoroughly. Perhaps he could've found some clues. But now, it was too late. He no longer had a chance.

Byron glanced at Macy, and they both raised their hands.

At this moment, he still had some hope in his heart as he thought that Macy would protect him.

However, he suddenly felt a sharp pain at the back of his head. He realized that Macy had hit him.

The next moment, Byron's vision went black, and he fell to the ground.

Byron had just seized power and hadn't had a chance to exert it before being captured by Macy.

Macy had once again achieved success. She alone had accomplished this mission.

In the meeting hall of the International Alliance, various forces had gathered together. The purpose of their meeting was clear. They were here to punish Caspian because his actions had affected regional peace.

Many forces felt threatened by him.

"Caspian is unexpectedly so aggressive. If we allow him to continue like this, he'll surely become our enemy. I think it's necessary for various forces to join hands to eliminate him.

"We must let the invincible Diatoranian God of War taste failure once. Otherwise, he'll think he's very powerful," an elder said angrily.

Although this elder was only at the level of an innate grandmaster, he had long despised Caspian's actions. That was why he took the initiative to voice out his opinion on attacking Caspian.

"What's the purpose of our alliance? Isn't it to maintain peace? Now that someone has disrupted the order, are all of you going to turn a blind eye?" another elder voiced out.

Their aim was to gather all forces together to deal with Caspian. Only in this way would they have a greater chance of success. "As long as you're willing to help, I'll also help!" another person said.

If dozens of forces united to deal with Caspian, it would absolutely be easy.

Caspian's existence made them feel threatened.

At this time, Jason entered the meeting hall. He looked extremely disheveled, like a refugee fleeing for his life.

"I didn't expect Caspian to be so ruthless that he actually wants to kill us all. I hope you all can help us!" Jason said pitifully. Upon hearing this, the other forces nodded in agreement.

"You're right. Caspian is indeed too arrogant. When Viktor and the others were killed by Caspian, many were upset by this. I think it's time to take action." Alexander nodded.

After several hours of discussion, the alliance decided to send a force to deal with Caspian. At the same time, they also began negotiations with Balthazar. However, Balthazar's attitude was surprisingly firm. He didn't agree with them at all.

With Caspian's reputation growing, his status in the eyes of ordinary people was also rising.

Especially in Southlake City, the people's admiration for Caspian was growing stronger.

In Stewart Residence, Kate was preening herself in front of a mirror.

A shopping mall in Southlake City was opening today, and the organizers unexpectedly invited her to attend the opening ceremony.

Moreover, the organizers offered quite a lot of money, hoping that Kate could say a few words.

Originally, the organizers wanted to invite Carl, but he refused. Kate was not confident either as she had never appeared on such a public occasion.

Now, with the opening ceremony, there would definitely be many people present. She wasn't sure if she was able to speak when she stood on the stage later.

Moreover, many celebrities and influential people would attend the opening ceremony. It made Kate even more nervous.

However, the organizers had already said that as long as she was willing to say a few words on stage, she could get a lot of money in return.

For the sake of money, Kate naturally wouldn't refuse. Besides, she enjoyed the feeling of being in the spotlight.

Recently, for some reason, the Stewart family had become a hot topic. Some people even invited Marilyn to participate in activities.

Many people knew that the Stewart family had cut ties with Caspian, but they didn't care. They just wanted a gimmick.

These businesses all wanted to rely on hype to improve their business.

This era was all about riding the wave of popularity.

But Carl didn't want to take part in such things. Many people had come to him, but he didn't want to make money using Caspian's popularity.

Kate was unwilling at first, but after receiving benefits, she realized that what she really wanted was money. All she cared about was making money. Please read the original content at .

Everyone saw her as a charming middle-aged woman, and she almost believed it herself.

Kate wasn't used to seeing so many handsome men flattering her and people giving her applause and admiration. However, when she returned home, the treatment

Moreover, whenever she saw Carl, she felt a headache. She wondered why she had to spend her life with such a man.

The Stewart family members were all enjoying the benefits brought by Caspian.

In contrast, Zoe felt troubled because of Caspian's identity.

Someone spread the news about her being the friend of Caspian's wife.

Originally, Zoe didn't have many fans, but this news doubled the number of her fans.

"Zoe, are you busy now?" Willow asked.

"Not really. I want to take a break for a while. How about we go out for a stroll?" Zoe suggested.

She didn't want to stay at home all the time. Since she hadn't been to the Il f ra {onaltiéae\ she wanted to take advantage of this opportunity to go out. Please read the original

"Why are you in the mood to have fun today?" Willow asked. "Humans need to relax. They can't just stay at home all the time, right?" Zoe said. "But we're quite tight on money right now, and you know the cost of living in Dhord City," Willow said.

"I don't care. My card is in your hand. I want to go out now." Zoe insisted.

The Almighty Lord Caspian

Chapter 823 United Front

Byron's subordinates were fleeing in a panic near the Clock Tower as they had now given up resistance.

Everywhere was now under the control of Sylvia's forces. Since there were too many defeated soldiers, Sylvia made a decision to gather them in a nearby city.

Sylvia and Dax stood atop the city gate with a smile. They had achieved complete victory. Now, all they needed was to wait for Caspian to arrive.

Before long, a vast crowd appeared, and it was Caspian's army.

Thousands of vehicles rushed forward in an imposing manner.

Caspian stood on one of the vehicles and waved toward Sylvia and the others.

Around Caspian were tens of thousands of elites, all of them meticulously trained. Their steps were uniform, as if they were robots.

As they neared the city gate, Caspian stepped down from the vehicle. Everyone lined up on both sides to welcome him.

Dax and Sylvia hurriedly approached him.

Dax warmly shook Caspian's hand as his face was full of excitement.

Sylvia also wanted to express her joy to Caspian, but she felt it was inappropriate, considering she was a woman.

If she and Caspian got too close, it would surely cause gossip.

As Caspian approached the city, a loud noise suddenly erupted. Pausing, he thought that someone had attempted an ambush. Immediately, he saw his subordinates begin shooting into the air.

"Sylvia, what are you doing?" Caspian asked, puzzled.

"Lord Caspian, we're welcoming you with a small ceremony." Dax chuckled.

Upon hearing this, Caspian was speechless. He didn't like these flashy things. If it was Sylvia's idea, he would've scolded her. But since it was Dax's idea, he didn't say much.

After all, Dax was one of the Five War Gods, and his subordinates were everywhere. Caspian couldn't embarrass him.

"Champion Santos, we're friends. There's no need to be so polite. Even though we've won, we still need to be careful of the International Alliance. They definitely won't sit and let this pass. They might cause trouble for us," Caspian said, somewhat worried.

"Lord Caspian, are you being overly cautious? The alliance is just a gathering of a few forces. They're just putting on a show. I don't think they dare to act," Dax said confidently.

He had been paying close attention to the situation with the alliance. In his opinion, they wouldn't mobilize a force. But just as he finished speaking, an intelligence officer rushed over in a panic.

The officer handed a piece of information to Caspian.

Caspian looked at it and immediately frowned.

"What's happening, Lord Caspian?" Dax became nervous when he saw Caspian's expression.

Caspian didn't say much and handed the document to him.

Dax took the document and read it carefully. He was completely stunned.

It was a challenge letter issued by the alliance, condemning Caspian's recent actions.

They demanded Caspian to immediately retreat with his subordinates. Otherwise, they would attack him. Many leaders of various forces had signed it. They had formed a united front.

Caspian also realized the seriousness of the situation. If the alliance really acted, it would be an unprecedented challenge for both him and Balthazar.

Just the thought of battling dozens of forces felt daunting.

But Caspian couldn't submit now. He had worked hard to lead his subordinates to victory. If he gave up the victory directly, it would dampen his subordinates' motivation.

"Macy, bring Manny over," Caspian said to Macy after a moment of thought.

Like the other champions, Dax also looked down on Manny because he only knew how to talk.

When Dax saw Manny approaching, he bowed and said, "According to our rules, you should bow too." Manny smiled indifferently and said, "We're not the same, so there's no need to follow your rules."

Dax's expression darkened when he saw Manny being rude. He wanted to teach him a lesson but was stopped by Caspian.

Caspian handed the document to Manny, who examined it carefully. "Mr. York, stop pretending. Do you want us to submit to the alliance?" Dax thought Manny wanted to persuade Caspian.

"Champion Santos, do you think we should go to war with the wen This wouldnt he godnlews or Lord dakbi . Manny didn't seem to mind Dax's words as his expression was calm. Please read the original content at .

"Regardless, Lord Caspian can't submit to the alliance. Our hard-won victory can't be taken away by others," Dax said angrily.

"I've just looked through the document. Now, dozens of forces have reached an agreement. Sieh's situation is dangerous for us. The ordinary citizens will face a disaster, and Lord Caspian will be the culprit!" Manny remained indifferent.

Please read the original content at .

"Nonsense! How could Lord Caspian be the culprit? We're just doing what's right!" Dax suddenly became irritated and pulled out his gun.

Although he couldn't kill in front of Caspian, he needed to intimidate Manny.

But Manny didn't care about him at all.

He knew that Dax wouldn't dare to lay hands on him. After all, Caspian was here, as well as so many subordinates.

"Lord Caspian, the alliance must've come to such a decision after much discussion. If we act recklessly now, it'll only bring more serious consequences," Manny said.

Caspian found Manny's words reasonable. "What measures do you think we should take, Mr. York?" Caspian asked.

"Lord Caspian, I can serve as a representative to negotiate with them. I can guarantee that I can come up with a perfect solution," Manny said confidently.

"Good. I'll report this matter. If His Majesty agrees, I'll let you be the Mm representative. This is also your chance to redeem yourself. Even if the result isn't good, we can buy some time and plan what's next," Caspian said. Please read the original content at .

"Lord Caspian, how do you plan to deal with the King of Filren?" Manny asked.

Chapter 824 Preparing for Negotiations

"Byron is now a prisoner, and we can handle him however we like. The power is in our hands." Caspian had long thought about how to deal with Byron, so this question wasn't difficult for him to answer.

"I've also learned a bit about Byron. He's not very smart. The reason he was so arrogant was for the sake of his reputation and his continuous tolerance for Jerry. Now that you've stepped in, he has immediately become a coward," Manny said.

"What do you think?" Caspian asked.

"I'm just going to express my own opinion. I think we can let Byron return to Filren. As long as we eliminate his subordinates, especially the biggest threat called Jason Gill, I think Byron will be powerless.

"Besides, Jason abandoned Byron at the most critical moment. He has fled elsewhere. If we eliminate Byron, Jason might cause trouble, which isn't good news. With the help of other forces, he might make a comeback."

"Alright, I understand. Laina, take Mr. York back to Dhord City now. I'll discuss this matter with the King."

"Got it!" Laina answered immediately.

Laina was supposed to feel happy that Caspian had tasked her as it was a sign that he trusted her.

But the thought of leaving him suddenly made her feel a bit sad. Only by staying by Caspian's side could she feel happiness.

When Laina caught herself with such thoughts, she was startled. "He's Lord Caspian. How can you have other thoughts about him? Besides, he's already married. You absolutely can't indulge in your wild fantasies now," she thought to herself.

Even though she did have feelings for Caspian, her rationality told her that she absolutely couldn't indulge in them.

She had always been a proud woman. For over 20 years, this was the first time she was in love. To prevent Caspian from noticing anything, she could only quickly leave.

In the eyes of others, Laina was still the aloof and beautiful ice queen. Filren was now in ruins as it was in complete chaos.

Many people could only live in temporary tents.

In a relatively spacious tent, Byron slowly woke up. As soon as he opened his eyes, he saw Macy smiling at him. By now, she had changed back into her suit of armor, and her curves looked extremely perfect.

At first, he didn't recognize her. When he got up, he saw that Caspian was there too. His limbs were free and not bound. "Byron, did you expect to meet in a place like this?" Caspian said with a smile. "Caspian, you sure know how to play tricks. If you have the guts, let's face off in a fair fight!" Byron said, somewhat angry.

"Of course, we can duel. But I won't play with the lives of my subordinates. Throughout history, the victors write the rules. As long as I win, I don't think anyone will care about how I do it!

"Losers are losers. No matter what you say, they're all excuses." Byron couldn't fool Caspian. "I think you're afraid!" Byron huffed angrily.

"Say what you want. There are only winners in this world. If you hadn't insisted on provoking me, the situation wouldn't have turned out like this," Caspian looked at Byron and said.

Caspian's words left Byron feeling a bit lost. He had no way out now since Caspian wouldn't fall for his tricks. Looking at Byron's nervous expression, Caspian smiled. "Now that everything has settled, whatever you say is useless." "Caspian, what do you want? Do you want to kill me?" Byron asked.

"I'm not sure yet. This is a matter between us, so I don't necessarily have to kill you. But it's pointless to keep someone like you, who brings disaster, alive!" Caspian said calmly.

"You can kill me if you like, just don't humiliate me. I'm a man of reputation," Byron said. "How I deal with you is my business. You have no say in this," Caspian said coldly.

Suddenly, Byron raised his palm and struck himself on the acupoint. This sudden move startled Macy, but she was too late to stop him.

Luckily, Caspian acted swiftly.

He grabbed Byron's arm and said coldly, "You can't die yet when I haven't let you!"

Byron didn't expect Caspian to be so powerful. Kenelm probably wouldn't stand a chance against Caspian. He couldn't understand why Caspian was so powerful at such a young age.

"Byron, I advise you to be honest. Maybe I can spare your life," Caspian said calmly.

Byron knew that Caspian was ruthless, and he dared not to mess around now.

Then, Byron looked at Macy and said, "You even have such a beautiful wife by your side. Your life is truly blessed!" Upon hearing Byron mistakenly think she was Caspian's wife, Macy felt embarrassed.

But she enjoyed the feeling very much. Being mistaken for Caspian's wife felt great.

Caspian didn't realize Byron's implication. He thought Byron was talking about Willow.

"I'm not a superficial person. I value a person's qualities more," Caspian said with a smile.

Now, Macy understood that Caspian was talking about Willow.

Byron thought about how his family was always full of schemes. He) {1 \

"Go and prepare some good food and wine. I'm going to have a chat with Byron," Caspian ordered. It would be much easier to get information out from Byron after getting him drunk.

Although Manny had already told Caspian about Byron's weakness, this matter was very important. Caspian needed to understand Byron more deeply.

Seeing Caspian's serious expression, Byron relaxed a little.

Soon, Macy brought in a whole roasted lamb and two bottles of wine.

The Almighty Lord Caspian

Chapter 825 All-Night Conversation

Caspian directly tore off a lamb leg and handed it to Byron.

Smelling the fragrant roast meat, Byron's mouth began to water. He couldn't resist anymore.

At this point, he didn't care whether the food was poisoned or not; he just wolfed it down.

After Byron had taken a few bites, Caspian poured a glass of wine and handed it to him.

Seeing the wine in front of him, Byron had a bold idea. If he could get Caspian drunk, maybe he would have a chance to escape. This was a rare opportunity for him.

After Byron had made up his mind, he became more enthusiastic and started drinking with Caspian.

"Caspian, although I'm the King of Filren, | feel quite aggrieved..."

Before Byron could finish his sentence, Caspian pointed at Macy and said, "Camden was killed by Macy."

Upon hearing this, Macy felt a bit unhappy.

Byron was stunned. He hadn't expected Macy to be so capable that she was able to infiltrate Filren and successfully accomplish the assassination. This kind of thing required a lot of courage.

In Byron's view, he thought Macy was Caspian's lover. After all, it was normal for someone like Caspian to have many admire him.

If not, why would Caspian personally lead a team to rescue Macy?

"| didn't expect Mrs. Lynch to be so skillfull. | truly admire her. But her deed had also given me an opportunity. Otherwise, how could | have risen to power?" Byron raised his glass and said to Caspian.

When Caspian heard Byron's words, he finally understood what was going on. Byron had mistaken Macy as his wife. As he was about to speak, Macy stood up directly.

"Thank you for the praise." Macy smiled.

Then, she took a sip of wine.

"Indeed, behind every successful man, there's an outstanding woman! It's truly admirable," Byron smiled and said. Afterward, he also drank a few more glasses.

Caspian thought he was very good at drinking, but now it seemed that Byron's alcohol tolerance was also good. It wouldn't be easy to get him drunk.

As they continued drinking, Byron became more talkative. Caspian knew that Byron had drunk too much by now. Even if Caspian didn't make him drink, Byron wanted to.

Unexpectedly, Byron suddenly slumped onto the table and cried bitterly.

Seeing this scene, Caspian finally felt relieved. He had finally broken through Byron's psychological defenses.

"Caspian, do you think it's easy to be a king? | can't sleep every night. | don't want to go to war, but because of public opinion, | have no choice! With you around, how could | dare to fight you?

"| took over the throne, but | have no real power. It's not easy for me either!" Byron cried, looking pitiful. "| understand. It's not easy for everyone!" Caspian said.

"Do you really understand? If you did, you'd save some of my reputation. Couldn't we just spar lightly? Why did you have to push me to a dead end? Do you know how my subordinates ridicule me?"

"They dare to laugh at you?"

"Yes! They say I'm incompetent, and it's all because of me that we're in such a desperate situation. If it weren't for the lack of manpower, I'd want to kill them all. | also want to enjoy my later years peacefully, but what can | do?

"Jerry suddenly came to me, and | thought my chance had come. | thought | could show off, but who knew..." As Byron spoke, he began to cry again. Seeing that he looked so pitiful, Caspian was somewhat moved.

After Byron drank too much, he fell asleep directly.

The next morning, Caspian pretended to be asleep. At this moment, Byron suddenly made a sound. He rubbed his temples and got up, looking a bit confused as he glanced around.

He only remembered eating with Caspian last night, but he couldn't remember anything after that. As Byron was about to leave, he suddenly noticed that Caspian was still asleep.

He was stunned for a moment and then quickly got up. The person in front of him, whom he had been thinking about killing day and night, was here. This was a perfect opportunity for him as Caspian was sleeping soundly.

Byron raised his hand and aimed at Caspian.

But he didn't dare to act. Besides, he remembered the scene of drinking and chatting with Caspian last night. Last night was the most comfort he had felt in a while.

He suddenly felt that having someone to confide in was extremely rare.

Byron instantly felt a little guilty. Caspian had been good to him | only thought about revenge. He was so narrow-minded and should be more tolerant. Please read the original content at .

Since he had already lost, he couldn't kill Caspian even if he wanted to escape. Otherwise, he would be despised by everyone. At the thought of this, Byron put down his hand as he couldn't bring himself to do it.

Finally, he returned to the couch and didn't lay a hand on Caspian.

Since he took office, he had been living in fear every day. Besides, everyone was wary of him.

This had made him extremely troubled.

Just then, Caspian stretched and rubbed his eyes as he pretended to have just woken up.

Seeing this, Byron immediately got up and asked, "Caspian, are you feeling well? Did you drink too much last night?"

Caspian was taken aback for a moment. He then smiled and said, "Yeah, I didn't expect

He now had no burdens in his heart.

"Byron, I drank too much yesterday and forgot everything. I didn't say anything | shouldn't have, did I?" Caspian pretended.

"I should be asking you this question, right? I also want to know if I revealed any secrets!" Byron joked.

"Caspian, for two enemies like us to drink together, it's truly unprecedented!" He sighed.

If the situations were different, Byron really wanted to become good friends with Caspian.

"We may not be on the same side, but that doesn't prevent us from being friends," Caspian said straightforwardly.

Byron was taken aback for a moment and then looked at Caspian. Both of them shook hands and this marked a historic moment.

Afterward, Caspian made a call to Sylvia. He asked her to provide Byron with a place to freshen up.
