

Lord of War 52

Chapter 52: . Cerroda Village

Seroda Village is the small village closest to the city of Anrolla from Tindes.

Because of its relatively good geographical location, this village is a transit point between Anrolla City and the border of Tindes, so although there are no special products, it is also very prosperous, and it is even large enough to be expanded into a small town. It's just such a place, it's naturally easy to breed problems, and because it's just a village, the defensive force can't keep up with the development, and it's inevitable that there is a mixture of fish and dragons.

When Sean and Cecilia got off the carriage, he felt at least a dozen malicious glances.

It's just that he doesn't care very much about it. From the outfits of those people, Sean can easily guess the occupation of the opponent. Although there may be some differences in ability, but with the Charles Sabre in hand, Xiao En does not put these ordinary people in the eyes. So far, the only thing that really made Sean feel a little threatening was the heavy armored knight Martin he saw last night.

The special advanced profession is far from what he can compare now, because the attribute point bonus ratio of the two sides is not the same starting line from the beginning.

"What are we doing here?" Cecilia asked curiously, "Is the person I'm looking for right here?"

"If I remember correctly." Sean nodded.

With regard to Alfred's deeds, Sean only knows something about him after he became famous. At that time, he was already in the fifth rank. He was obviously only a relatively ordinary advanced class, but his combat effectiveness was better than five. Players with special advanced levels are much stronger, and in that era, there were very few players who could hide advanced levels. It is precisely because of this that Sean's understanding of this npc will be a little deeper, so that he knows that Alfred was originally from Puerto Rico and lived in Cerroda Village at the very beginning.

He left his hometown in May 1833 and became a registered member of the Adventurers' Guild. Regarding his subduing mission, it was a main task involving the war between the Kingdom of Portoroa and the Kingdom of Selian. At the beginning, this main task had to be completed in the game before it would be favored by Alfred, and then passed A series of very complicated intimacy cultivation can make him follow.

And there is only one npc, but there are many players, which naturally inevitably leads to various * pk.

Xiao En dared to come to the future God of War now. Naturally, it was not a whim, but an action that was decided after careful consideration.

In this world, although the copies of the original game are still retained, these copies are not there at the beginning, but need to "pass" to "occur", just like the previous "Wandering Darkness" A copy, this copy must be born after the black warrior arrives in that small village. Before that, Xiao En tried to dig out a treasure in his memory, but found nothing at the location. After that, Xiao En learned through other means that the family is not yet developed and is still in a state of despair. How could it be possible? Will there be treasures?

The next thing is that Harley and Du Luen come to him as guides. Shaun is 100% sure that there was absolutely no such task in the game at the beginning—or not, but at that time no player could complete it. In other words, in the history of the game, Du Luen is a mortal character. And this can also be seen from the current competition for heirs from Tindes.

Du Luen is completely at a disadvantage.

What happened next was to help the Black Cat Chamber of Commerce find the spinel. In the game, this incident also happened in reality, but it was not him who killed this instance first, but the player who was born in the Kingdom of Portoroa. But now in reality, there is no second player besides Sean, so if he hadn't taken Du Luen across the Forest of Starfall, it would be impossible to help the Black Cat Chamber of Commerce regain the obelisk.

And this series of changes all originated from Sean's desire for two treasures in Tindes' collar.

Crimson Flame and Bavarian Armplates to make drawings.

What Shaun didn't know was that it was precisely because he helped the Black Cat Chamber of Commerce that Du Luen was temporarily safe.

But through the progress and changes in the plot of this series of missions, Sean can already conclude that he can definitely bring Alfredera over now, without waiting for a war between the Kingdom of Portoroa and the Kingdom of Celian.

Of course, how to win, this is a technical job.

Sean and Cecilia had just stepped into a hotel in the village south of the village, and five people followed them.

This hotel occupies a large area. It is made up of six houses. The entire first floor is the layout of the pub. There are more than a dozen waitresses busy in it. Most of them have one when they see Sean. It was a bright feeling, but when they saw Cecilia who was next to Sean, the eyes of these waitresses also naturally dimmed.

The hotel has three floors. Except for the pub and restaurant on the first floor, the second and third floors are houses. But the houses here are not more spacious than those in Arthur City. Each room has only a single bed against the wall and a small bedside table. Besides that, there is no wardrobe, let alone a bathroom.

This makes Sean very uncomfortable.

Although he knew that hotels in many villages and towns on the Marvel Continent had this pattern, he could only go to the bathhouse if he wanted to take a bath, and it was not rare in the game. But at that time, he just borrowed this place as a safe offline location. How could it be possible to live in such a place, and even if he came to this world later, Sean relied on his own efforts within three days. He got enough money to rent a house, so it was his first experience of this kind of simple living place.

But the room is simple, of course, there is also the advantage of simple, that is, the accommodation fee is cheap.

A small room like this only costs five Puerto Rico coins a night, and if you want to pack a breakfast, it only costs ten Puerto Rico coins. But breakfast is naturally impossible to have meat or the like, just three croissants and a large cup of hot milk.

Because he drove the car overnight, Sean was a little tired at this time, so he ordered two rooms and some meat, and all the expenses were no more than 20 copper coins. Instead of taking out gold and silver coins to pay the bill, he took out a handful of copper coins, counted twenty or so and passed them to the boss, and put the rest back in his pockets—this was still on the road with the coachman. Redeemed.

Although he is not afraid of those who have bad intentions, he does not have so much time to toss with them. He knows whether he has money or not, and there is no need to show off like an idiot.

And the facts were as expected by Sean. After seeing him take out these copper coins, three of the five people who had followed him around in the tavern chose to leave. Only two of them were still unwilling to give up. Stayed. Judging from the attire on these two men, Sean knew that they should be a thief-like profession. If they face a confrontation, they have no guts, so they can only do petty thefts.

Thinking of this, Sean sighed helplessly. Dealing with these thieves was one of the most troublesome things.

But since they don't want to leave, Sean doesn't mind giving them a memorable lesson.

After a simple breakfast, Cecilia was already rubbing her eyes sleepily, and Sean asked her to go back to the room to sleep first, but she was sitting in front of the stage.

"Guest, what else do you have?" The hotel owner who saw Sean still sitting here and was wiping the cup to prepare for the evening business finally spoke.

"I want to ask, do you know a person named Alfred?" Sean smiled and asked, but the corner of his eye was starting to look around.

He noticed that a thief had gotten up and walked towards the stairs on the second floor.

The hotel owner faced Sean's question and did not answer. He just smiled friendly, and the action of wiping the wine glass in his hand did not change at all.

Shaun took out a handful of Puerto Rico coins from his pocket again, there were about seventy or eighty coins in it, and then put the first one on the table.

The hotel owner is still smiling, with a little disdain in his eyes.

Shaun didn't care, and put a few more on it, making up five.

The hotel owner squinted at Sean, and there was a little anger between his brows. This action by Sean was obviously an insult.

At this time, the thief had already walked up the stairs on the second floor. The other thief looked a little struggling and seemed to want to go upstairs, but for some reason, he did not act rashly, but still sat in his original position. , Responsible for staring at Sean.

"I'll take care of something first." Sean said softly, and at the same time added five Puerto Rico coins to the top, "The boss helps me take care of this money."

Having said that, ignoring the reaction of the innkeeper and the other thief, Xiao En got up and walked towards the second floor. The large amount of copper coins in his hand were all thrown on the table, and only the ten were lost by Sean. The copper coins that were picked out were placed in perfect condition, and the two piles of money formed a strange and sharp contrast. At this time, besides the thief, there were four or five people on the first floor of the tavern. Seeing the copper coins on the table, although not many, it was enough for them to buy a few nights drunk. Many people were a little bit bright before their eyes.

But at this time, the owner of the hotel raised his eyelids slightly and glanced at the several people in the hotel. Everyone was suddenly surprised and stopped going to the stands for the money. But the hotel owner's brows were always frowning, and his gaze on the second floor was a little bit more confused and worried. From his position, he could only see the back of Sean that flashed after stepping on the second floor.

After a while, the second floor is still calm as before, there is no fighting or arguing, everything is calm and weird.

Just when the hotel owner couldn't sit still and wanted to take a look, Sean finally got down from the second floor. But at this moment, everyone looked surprised, because Sean carried a person in his hand. This person was the thief who went up to the second floor before. At this moment, his life and death are unknown, like a dead dog. When Xiao En held him in his hand, he saw Xiao En walk to the door of the hotel and threw the thief out with a flick of his hand.

When came back, Sean glanced at the other thief. At that moment, the thief had the illusion of being targeted by a fierce beast. He didn't dare to stay here, hurriedly drank the glass of juice in front of him, and immediately left the hotel after putting down two copper coins.

When Xiao En returned to the stage again, the stack of ten copper coins had disappeared.

"Alfred, there are not many people who don't know him in this village. I am afraid there are not many." The hotel owner finally wiped a cup and put it gently. "He may not be a good husband, but Definitely a good father."

"Where can I find him?" Sean asked again.

"This information is a bit expensive." The hotel owner also saw that Sean was not easy, and after a little meditation, he realized that the question that Sean asked just now was of high standard, and it was indeed worth only ten copper coins. .

Because he asked "Do you know" instead of "Do you know", there is a fundamental difference in meaning.

"How expensive?"

"A Portoroa silver coin."

Xiao En chuckled, and the copper coin on the table had been put back into his pocket, replaced by a silver coin with the emblem of the Kingdom of Puerto Rico on the stage.