Love Has Its Will

Chapter 12

Leo picked up the divorce agreement and walked to the door. When he just walked to the door, he was called by Brandon behind him:

“I heard that Cain wanted to win over the investment bank of Dawson Investment Bank?”

Leo nodded and replied, “Yes.”

The gloom in his eyes deepened: “I have an appointment with Bob Dawson this afternoon.”

“Okay.”

Leo didn't dare to look back at the icy Brandon. He knew precisely what Brandon meant by asking Bob Dawson out for dinner. Cain was going to be in big trouble.

As for what was happening here, Savanna had no idea at all.

The longer she waited, the more restless she became. She had already stood up from the chair more than ten times. Seeing that Savanna was uneasy and unable to keep calm, Cain walked outside the operating room.

The door of the operating room finally opened.

Savanna ran to the operating room. The nurse in the front stopped her. She was also afraid that her father would be emotional, so she followed the nurse back to the ward.

Someone suddenly called Cain when he was about to follow Savanna's ward. He took out his phone from his pocket and went to the safe passage to answer the phone.

After answering the phone, Cain went into the ward and said to Savanna: “I have something to deal with in the company. I'll be back soon.”

She knew that Cain's company had just been established, and there were many complicated things. She was about to tell Cain that he could go; no need to stay here.

But as soon as she turned around, Cain had already disappeared from the ward.

The doctor said that although the operation was very successful, David was still in danger.

According to the doctor's instructions, Savanna stayed in the ward taking care of David for two days without sleep. After the phone call, Cain didn't show up again.

Of course, she didn't expect Cain would appear.

In her eyes, he was just her brother.

“Savanna...”

A boarse voice sounded. She turned around and saw the tired look on David's pale face.

Tears welled up in her eyes.

She called the doctor. After the doctor examined David's body, with a sense of relief, he told Savanna that Mr. Thompson was out of danger.

But she still had to take good care of her father.

After sending the doctor away, she sat next to David. He said to her weakly: "Call Justin to come here. I need to ask him something."

"Okay."

Taking out her phone, she called Justin and found an excuse to leave the ward. After a while, Justin came in a hurry, and she blocked him outside the ward:

"My father might ask you something about the loan. You have chosen a good answer.

He can't be provoked anymore."

"Okay."

Justin understood it by heart.

The two entered the ward one after the other.

Savanna was right; David couldn't wait to ask Justin about the loan.

Justin told David that Eden Newton agreed to lend to the Thompson, and Thompson's deficit has been made up. Justin also said that Thompson would be fine with Savanna's in charge and told Mr.

Thompson to get well.

David was so happy that his face glowed and said: "When I recover, I will invite President Newton to a banquet. He is a good man who solved the urgent problem of our Thompson group."

After Justin left, David held Savanna's hand and said happily

"Thank you, Savanna."

"It's not all my credit. It's all Brandon's work."

Regardless of the pain in her heart, she answered with a smile.

At the mention of Brandon, Savanna was even happier. He sighed with emotion:

"Fortunately, you married Brandon or our Thompson group..."

David didn't finish his words, and what he wanted to say later was known by Savanna.

"Don't make it too hard for him. He has to take care of the Thompson group even though he is in

It was because he knew too well about his ability of Brandon that he agreed to marry his precious daughter to him two years ago. Sure enough, he was not mistaken.

He was in a good mood and gradually got better.

Seeing that Mr. Thompson's condition was improving, Savanna asked Joyce took care of her father. She went back to the Thompson group. As soon as she entered the office, Justin came over. He said to her anxiously.

"Ms. Thompson, I can't hold it anymore."

Justin didn't dare close his eyes for the past two days. All he did was deal with the debt collectors' calls day and night.

Savanna knew there was no secret about the Thompson group being forced to claim debt last time. Most of the Thompson group's creditors were watching the attitude of the Cassel group. The silence of Brandon boosted the courage of the Thompson group's creditor. So all of the creditors began to claw at the Thompson group.

Savanna: "Release my phone number."

Justin hesitated for a while and then went out to do his work.

Savanna's phone number appeared on the public platform, receiving at least thousands of debt calls a day. She repeated the exact words tirelessly:

"I'm sorry. Please give the Thompson group some more time. After the new year, we will pay off your debts."

"Thompson group is an empty shell company, and David is a liar. Thompson group will wait for the lawyer's letter!"

Many people exposed the other side of their human nature that they hid carefully.

In the evening, Savanna sat in her office. The light fell on her face. Her face was pale.

She looked down at the top search on her phone:

A company's finance was in crisis, and the son-in-law of the declining family stood by to flatter the dream girl in his heart,

Although the news didn't mention which company was in financial crisis, the city was not big, and the people in the circle were all acquaintances.

There was no secret in the upper class of the city.

Moreover, the Cassel group was one of the top wealthy families in the city. As the heir, Brandon's movement would become the paparazzi's focus.
