Chapter 17

Before he could say the word “money”, he was interrupted by Savanna, “Yes, I’m short of money. The whole city knows that I’m short of money, but it’s a different thing from our divorce.”

“If you are short of money, just tell me. You have married me for two years. I won’t...”

Before Brandon finished his words, Savanna interrupted him again in a hurry.

“I just want what I deserve.” The look in Savanna’s eyes became deep and calm, and her face was more indifferent than ever.

The smile froze on his lips, and he lifted his thin lips and said, “Fine.”

Brandon put out the cigarette, threw it to his feet, and stamped it out.

Brandon walked past her and strode inside. When he just arrived at the door, he turned around and looked at Savanna. He frowned and said coldly, “I hope you won’t regret it.”

Then he strode inside the court.

Savanna had to trot to catch up with him.

The female staff saw that Brandon had come back, and the flush on her face rose again. Her voice was much gentler than just now. She quickly took the pamphlet and let them fill it in.

Brandon filled it out seriously. He didn’t look at Savanna during the whole process.

Brandon took the divorce certificate from the staff and walked out of the door without looking back.

He left.

After taking the divorce certificate and walking out of the court, Savanna suddenly found out that although Brandon agreed to give her several houses, she did not have a property certificate. Even if she had a property certificate, it would not be under her name. Without putting them under her name, the house did not belong to her, nor could it be sold in a short time.

When Savanna was about to call Brandon, someone sent her a message.

She dicked on the phone and saw a message from Brandon: “Ask Leo for help tomorrow. He will deal with the house with you.

You just couldn’t wait could you? After all, Cain was your first love. He is just different, right?

First love?

Did he mean Cain Wilson?

What did their divorce have to do with Cain?

Finally, it dawned on Savanna that she was eager to divorce him because she wanted to be with Cain.

He misunderstood her. But that's fine.

Taking out her phone, she typed: "You are right."

Then, there was no response from Brandon.

After the house thing was settled, the messages between her and Brandon were stopped on the words "you are right".

Soon, she sold out the house given by Brandon.

After paying off the bank loan, there was still 5 million left. Savanna used the money to bribe into the detention center, and they agreed to let her meet with her father, David. She couldn't believe that the skinny man with gray hair was her beloved father.

"Dad."

She shouted, tears blurred her eyes!

David opened his eyes. Maybe because of the strong light, his pupils shrank and his eyes narrowed quickly.

Her father's condition made her heartache.

It was not easy to stay in prison. No one could bear the interrogation from time to time, not to mention his illness.

Her father's eye disease was caused by the cast under the strong light during the interrogation,

"Dad, it's me, Savanna. I'm here to see you."

She stroked her father's hair, tears welling up in her eyes.

It took him a long time to recognize her.

David's indifferent expression gradually fluctuated, and his lips wriggled for a long time, but he could not get a word out of him.

Perhaps he was annoyed that he couldn't say anything. so he was so agitated that he wanted to slap

"I'm driving. What's up, Giselle?"

"Come to the old mansion. I have something to tell you."

"Okay."

Savanna guessed that Giselle Cassel must have known about her divorce with Brandon, so she called her to come home.

After hanging up the phone, she thought about how to tell Giselle Cassel about their divorce while driving

She hadn't seen Giselle Cassel since the elder Mr. Cassel's birthday party.

When she arrived at the Cassel mansion, the servant was already waiting at the door.

The servant led her to Giselle Cassel's living room.

Seeing her, the frown on Giselle Cassel's eyebrows immediately deepened. She took a look at Savanna and handed the velvet box to her, "Open it."

Savanna took the box and opened it. There was a Bvlgari diamond ring.

She didn't know what to say.

Giselle Cassel said, "Brandon redeemed it from the pawnshop. He is too embarrassed to give it to you, so I do it for him. Savanna, Brandon is..."

As far as she knew, Brandon wouldn't do such a thing.

The ring should have been redeemed by Giselle Cassel. The reason why she asked her to come here was that she wanted Savanna and Brandon to come back together.

Savanna didn't want to ask how Giselle Cassel knew that she had pawned the wedding ring.

She didn't want to give her mother-in-law any more hope. She knew it too well that the more hope she had, the more disappointed she would be.

Therefore, she said, "I have divorced him. From now on, we have nothing to do with each other."

As soon as Savanna informed her, Giselle Cassel could no longer pretend to know nothing.

Giselle sighed, with anxiety in her eyes, "Savanna, since Winnie's leg is broken, I can only allow her to stay at home for the time being. She is only staying at home for now.

Brandon has promised me that he will send her abroad as soon as her leg recovers."

Obviously, because Winnie broke her leg, Giselle felt pity for her and allowed her to stay at home.

Pretending to be pitiful and winning others' sympathy was Winnie's good trick.
