

Chapter 17 Because I need you

Alston nodded, his heart in his mouth, "Did I guess wrong?"

Elena shook her head speechlessly, "Alston, you never know what I like, so you'd better stop."

She inhaled and raised her eyes, "You know why I like to come here? That's because the entrees here are your favorite. You have a bad stomach, and this is the only place you can eat."

"So... what do you like to eat?" Alston did not expect that answer from Elena at all. He thought they just happened to both like the food here. He never thought it was her accommodating him.

"Does it matter?" She asked again, "We're no longer together, and I'm not pestering you. So did you just find your conscience and suddenly fall in love with me?"

Alston subconsciously shook his head and blurted out, "How is it possible?"

Elena smiled, shrugging her shoulder, "See, I knew it would be like this, so let's just leave each other alone."

After saying that, she got up to go outside, but her wrist was caught by Alston.

He said, "Elena, you can't go."

"Why can't I?" Elena really did not understand. At this moment, he should be scolding her, but he actually begged her?

For a moment she wanted to see if the sun rose from the west today.

"Because... because I need you." Alston originally found it a little difficult to say this, but he didn't think that much when things between them came to this.

Then he repeated, "Elena, I need you, I need you badly."

"Is that so?" Elena massaged her brow and said, "But, do I have to stay just because you need me? What kind of reason is this? You have to know that even those interns looking for jobs have the right to say no, not to mention with my ability, you can't afford to hire me."

These words were like thunder, as if what he said was ridiculous to the extreme.

But Alston was not thinking this way . He believed that, as long as he said it, Elena would definitely stay. And as long as he requested, Elena would definitely make it for him.

This idea is what makes him so arrogant in front of her, and then no matter how great she is, she has to serve him, which makes him extremely satisfied.

So, while he enjoyed Elena's giving, he did not put her in his eyes, only thinking that this was what she should do, and that she owed him.

But the fact was that Elena never owed him. She had the right to choose after she left him.

Alston couldn't accept this going to happen, so he invited Elena to dinner.

But he didn't expect at all that Elena would actually be so cold-hearted and didn't even take a single bite.

It was like all these things he liked were worthless in front of her.

Alston was dumbfounded, feeling his worldview impacted.

And at this time, Elena unveiled everything straightforwardly, "Alston, you have always hated me. You know yourself well. This time you put aside your pride to come to me, partly because you are unaccustomed, and partly because of the board of directors."

She closed her eyes for a moment and massaged her temples, "Have I made myself clear enough?"