Chapter 471

“Let’s go.”

Not long after, Savanna and a girl came out of the public bathroom one after another.

When that girl came out, she sneakily glanced in the direction of Brandon.

She was cautious at first, and then her pupils trembled. She was very surprised.

That girl never thought the control freak husband that Savanna mentioned was actually a handsome guy.

Just in the public bathroom, Savanna suddenly ran over to the girl for help, saying that she was being watched by her husband and needed to borrow her phone to make a call for help.

The girl originally wanted to persuade her to call 911. But on second thought, the police probably wouldn’t be able to deal with the domestic affair. The girl generously took out her phone and handed it to Savanna.

Due to the urgency of the situation, Savanna quickly made the phone call. She briefly explained the matter and returned the phone to the owner before rushing out of the bathroom.

“Let’s go back. Roya is still waiting at home,” she said as she sat in her wheelchair.

Brandon nodded and pushed the wheelchair to leave.

Behind him, the girl who lent her phone to Savanna quietly poked her head out. Her gaze was a little confused.

The girl felt like the two of them were quite compatible. Was that handsome guy really a perverted control freak?

Why did she feel that it was not like him? If there was anything strange about it, it was that the handsome guy looked a little gloomy.

But no matter what, in her opinion, that handsome guy had nothing to do with being a pervert!

After returning, Savanna was a little too quiet. She no longer tried to find ways to run outside. She comforted children, watered flowers, drank afternoon tea, and peacefully lived in a luxurious cage. It was as if she never mentioned divorce at all.

During this time, Savanna asked to go to Tye’s school twice. The first time, it was Brandon who accompanied her there.

“Kaff, kaff, kaff...”

The shackles on her throat suddenly loosened, and fresh air poured into her throat. Savanna choked and coughed.

She was pressed against the dining table, her back and hair covered in soup, sticky and uncomfortable.

Savanna wanted to get up, but because she had just been choked to death, her muscles were now cramping, and she did not have the strength to move.

“Ms. Thompson! Ms. Thompson, are you alright?”

Lizeth quickly ran over and anxiously helped

Savanna up from the mess.

At that time, Brandon stood firmly in front of the dining table.

The hand that was stuck on Savanna’s neck was stiffly suspended in the air. Brandon slowly raised his hand, his dark eyes full of disbelief.

What did Brandon do?

He almost killed Savanna!

The most terrifying thing was that when his hand was stuck on Savanna’s neck and pinched hard, Brandon was completely unconscious.

It was as if someone had invaded his consciousness and controlled him.

What exactly was wrong with Brandon? His back was covered in a cold sweat.

“Ms. Thompson, are you alright? I’ll go upstairs with you to wash up,” said Lizeth as she looked at Savanna’s sorry state.

Savanna nodded, her throat was now tight, and she felt that she was still being strangled. Her lips were numb, and she could not speak at all.

“Slow down.” Lizeth supported Savanna, trying to bypass Brandon standing in the way.

At that time, Brandon, who was standing in front of the table, had a gloomy expression on his face, and his entire body emitted a rustling cold air as if he was a terrifying monster.

Just as Lizeth and Savanna walked to the side, Brandon stepped forward and blocked their way once again.

Savanna saw him come closer. Her back tightened. She retreated two steps in fear.

“Don’t come over!” Savanna’s dry throat made a hoarse sound.

Brandon left the ward and took the elevator to the fifth floor, the psychiatric department.

Previously, Rex had advised him to go to the psychiatric department.

At that time, Brandon only thought that Rex was scolding him, and it was only today that he realized how serious it was.

Brandon had shares of this hospital. He was recognized as soon as he entered the hospital. The nurse on duty quickly called. the director of the department.

"Mr. Gregory, Mr. Cassel is here."

Brandon was diagnosed with depression by Emerson before. Emerson prescribed the medicine accordingly but told him that he gotta search for the real cure himself. After that, Brandon did not come to ask Emerson again. It seemed that he had found the cure.

"Mr. Cassel, long time no see. Are you here for a follow-up?" Emerson asked.

Brandon told Emerson everything that had happened when they arrived at the office.

When Brandon came back to his senses and saw that his hand was pinching Savanna's neck, his pupils suddenly contracted, and his eyes revealed regret.

"I don't want to hurt her at all, but I lost control. When I grabbed her neck, I was unconscious."

Emerson frowned when he heard this.

“Mr. Cassel, do you still remember when I diagnosed you with depression? Now I suspect that your condition has deteriorated and is developing in the direction of bipolar disorder.”

Brandon’s expression instantly changed when he heard the words “bipolar disorder”.

“Are you saying that I lost control because of this illness and almost killed my wife?”

Emerson nodded and said, “I can’t rule out this possibility. That’s what happens when the patient is sick, his consciousness is a mess. He can’t control his body at all.”

The office fell into a long silence.

“Can this disease be cured?” after a while, Brandon asked slowly.

Emerson's examination was detailed, and he informed Brandon to get the results two days later.

For the rest of the time, Brandon knew that

Savanna was afraid of her and did not dare to stay with her directly. Instead, he waited quietly at the door like a guardian.

Brandon had just entered the elevator and went upstairs to get a diagnosis report from the psychiatric department. At that time, the elevator door next to him suddenly opened.

A tall man in a black jacket, holding the hand of a little boy who was as tall as the man's waist, walked out of the elevator.

"Dad, which ward does Savanna live in?" The child looked left and right anxiously. "How is Savanna? Will something happen to her?"

"Mandel, don't be so nervous. You will know it soon when you go and take a look at her."

There was a bouquet of flowers in the other hand of the man. A card was embedded in the elegant flowers, and on it was written some greetings.

Tyrell stared at the door of a ward and murmured the ward number, "Room 308. That's it."

"Knock on the door," Tyrell commanded Mandel.

Mandel knocked on the door heavily. After suffering a lot, Savanna was frightened.

Hearing someone knocking on the door heavily, she naturally got scared.

She nestled on the bed in the ward, not daring to breathe.

“Savanna, I’m Mandel. I’m here to see you.”

Hearing Mandel’s voice, Savanna finally felt relieved.

It turned out that Brandon had not returned.

“The door is not locked. Come in,” Savanna answered.

The next second, the door was pushed open. Mandel rushed in joyfully.

Mandel had a smile on his face. His carefree appearance was very infectious.

Savanna’s tense spirit also relaxed. Mandel climbed onto the bed, his chubby face sticking to her hand.

“Savanna, what happened to you? Are you in bad health? Why are you always in the hospital?”

Actually, after Mandel reunited with his biological father, Mandel and Savanna always met in the hospital.

"Wasn't you in a wheelchair?"

Tyrell was stunned. He was shocked by what he had heard. His face was full of disbelief.

"Mr. Cassel, stop joking."

That person just now looked exactly like Brandon. How could it not be him?

"Do you think I'm in the mood to joke now?"

Enter title... Brandon held the examination report in his hand. The double pressure of marriage and illness intertwined, making his face very ugly.

"Then I might have seen wrongly," Tyrell smiled and stopped talking about it.

After all, it was not strange that someone looked like Brandon.

Besides, Tyrell was more concerned about another thing now. "Mr. Cassel, what are you doing in the psychiatry department?"

Tyrell seemed to be concerned, but he was already looking at the report in Brandon's hands.

Fortunately, the report was sealed. And Tyrell could only see the folder.

"It's none of your business." Brandon glared at him coldly, his face filled with displeasure.

Tyrell smiled indifferently. "Mr. Cassel, don't be angry. I was just joking."

Mandel struggled to jump down from Tyrell's arms and ran to Tyrell.

"Daddy, what's wrong with you? You guys-don't know how to take care of yourselves. Why did you and Savanna fall sick the moment I left?"

Brandon keenly caught the key information in Mandel's words. He frowned and asked,

"Did you go to see Savanna?"

"I heard that Ms. Thompson is sick. So, I dropped by to take a look. Do you mind it?"

"Who told you that she was in the hospital?"

Brandon's tone became colder and colder.

"Are you sure?" Brandon asked.

Savanna nodded guiltily. Then she felt sad. "Mr. Cassel, aren't you tired of acting?"

"What do you mean?" Brandon frowned. He didn't know why she said that.

"I know why you lost control." Savanna looked at him sharply.

Brandon's heart tightened, and he clenched the diagnosis report in his hand.

He thought, when did the matter of my bipolar disorder leak out? Savanna has been in the ward. How did she get to know it?

"Savanna, actually I..." For the first time, Brandon, who was afraid of nothing, felt scared.

Brandon was afraid that he would be abandoned because of this illness.

"You don't have to hide it from me. I heard that Winnie is dead," Savanna said angrily.

Brandon didn't understand what Savanna meant. What did Winnie's death have to do with what she was saying?

Moreover, the one who died was not Winnie, but her younger sister, Flora. She had disguised as Winnie!

"Your beloved woman is dead. You are sad and can't figure it out, so you vented your anger at me. Right?" Savanna mocked herself, but tears filled her eyes.

"No wonder you had such a big reaction. It was because when I mentioned divorce, Winnie was already dead! You hate me, right? Because I brought up divorce as soon as she died."

"Savanna, what are you talking about?" Brandon frowned and explained patiently,

"She is indeed dead, but I have never vented my anger on you because of her death. I hurt you because of..."

Savanna was determined to ask Brandon why he did that.

Since Brandon allowed his mistress to offend her, Savanna had no reason to be tolerant. She wanted to make it clear.

When Savanna was about to open the door, she was stopped.

“Ms. Thompson, I’m sorry. Without Mr. Cassel’s order, we can’t let you out.”

Two bodyguards stopped Savanna.

Lizeth couldn’t bear it any longer and scolded, “Are you blind? Mr. Cassel is over there. Can’t you see?”

One bodyguard answered, “We can. However, we are following Mr. Cassel’s order. No matter what happens, no one could let Ms. Thompson go without Mr. Cassel’s order.”

Lizeth was so angry that she stamped her feet. “You guys are one-track-minded.”

Finn was very clear about his own condition.

He had a big picture in his mind, and there was a lot to do, so Finn didn't have the time to persuade Brandon slowly.

Therefore, Finn chose the riskiest method and directly got Brandon involved.

When Brandon became part of it, he naturally had no way to reject Finn's request.

"Mr. Orwell, when do you want to meet? If there's anything I can do, just call me."

Finn cracked a smile and pinched his lips. Then he said, "Thank you, Mr. Sharp."

"Mr. Orwell, you're welcome. If it wasn't for your family's help, I wouldn't have been able to get here."

After that, Darwin changed the topic and mentioned Brandon again.

"Mr. Cassel is my patient. I've contacted him, and it's hard to handle him. I'm afraid it will take a bit of effort if you want to take advantage of him."

Hearing that, Finn laughed out loud. "That's what I wanted. I don't want a puppet, but someone who can truly manage the Orwell Group well."

Meanwhile, Brandon, the ideal candidate in Finn's mind, was struggling in his marriage.

At this time, Brandon parked the black Ferrari in front of the villa.

"Where's Mrs. Cassel?"

Brandon stuck his head out of the window and asked the bodyguards impatiently, "If you let her go, you won't end well!"

When the two bodyguards heard this, they broke out in a cold sweat. Fortunately, they just didn't let Savanna go.

"Brandon, have you seen it clearly? Is there anything else you want to quibble about?"

Savanna appeared in the surveillance room.

She stood behind Brandon and looked at the surveillance video coldly. The corners of her mouth curled into a disdainful smile.

The surveillance video was still playing. At first, only Brandon's face could be seen through the car window. Then, a woman with long hair was seen, and she kissed his face.

"Mr. Cassel, this is the woman you just asked. Lizeth and I as well as the surveillance video all remembered this for you."

Savanna was displeased and deliberately said this to stimulate him.

She had clearly already proposed a divorce. Even if Brandon didn't love her, he should hook up with girls after getting divorced.

On one hand, he refused to divorce, and on the other, he brought his mistress back to provoke Savanna.

It was really disgusting.

"It was not me."

Brandon frowned.

Although his tone was firm, the words he said were not convincing.

"Mr. Cassel, how could this not be you? This person looks exactly like you!"

Lizeth could not help but complain.

Lizeth really couldn't stand it anymore. Savanna just gave birth to the child, and her husband brought a mistress to provoke Savanna. Who could tolerate this?

"As I said, this person is not me."

Brandon unconsciously clenched his fists after watching the entire process of provocation in the surveillance video.

He remembered the man in the wheelchair that he saw in the hospital. He knew that it was definitely not a coincidence to see someone who looked exactly like him in a small hospital.

He wondered, who exactly is that person? What's his purpose?

Kadyn raised his hands in surrender, "Besides, Savanna likes you so much that I can't win her love even if I want to."

In the past, Brandon would naturally proudly admit that Savanna liked him to death.

However, times changed. Savanna's love for Brandon had probably already disappeared. Otherwise, she would not be so persistent in divorcing him.

"Don't meddle in the matters between me and Savanna. If there is nothing else, get lost. Don't get on my way home."

Brandon had a straight face.

"All right. I'll leave."

Kadyn took a step back.

Seeing that the car was about to drive away, Kadyn suddenly reached out to knock on the car window.

"I almost forgot. I just found something strange."

Brandon sat in the driver's seat and raised his chin. "What's it?"

"If it weren't for the daytime, I would have felt like I ran into a ghost. When I came over, I saw someone who looked exactly like you!"

Kadyn said exaggeratedly, "If it weren't for the fact that he couldn't kick me in his wheelchair, I would have suspected that it was really you."

After being reminded by Kadyn, Brandon suddenly had a flash of inspiration. The person who had just sent the text message was probably the person who looked exactly like Brandon!

That person said in the text message that he wanted to give Brandon a gift of greeting. What did that mean?

Brandon thought quickly, and the more he thought about it, the more flustered he felt.

Would the person make a move on Savanna?
