Chapter 501 I Won't Go to the Hospital

"Finn, what's the matter? Your face is so pale."

In an Aston Martin, Lilia was at a loss as she hugged Finn, who was spasming due to the pain. She was so anxious and cried.

Finn was lying on the steering wheel, and his stomach was in pain. His face was pale, and cold sweat covered his forehead.

"Lilia, don't worry. I just have a stomachache. Wait for a moment. I will be fine."

"You're lying. How can a stomachache be so serious?" Lilia held Finn's arm, trembling with fear. "Did you have appendicitis? It might be lethal if you didn't accept treatment. I will call the ambulance immediately."

As soon as Lilia took out her phone, she was stopped by Finn, who was so painful that he could not sit straight.

"No need to call an ambulance. I will call Dr. Sharp."

Lilia knew that the doctor Finn mentioned was Darwin. As the dean of the hospital, Darwin must be more reliable than the doctors coming with the ambulance. "What is Dr. Sharp's number? I'll call him."

"It is in the address book." Finn took out his phone.

Lilia took the phone with her trembling hands. He found the number and dialed it.

It was Darwin's private number, so Darwin picked up the phone quickly. "Mr. Orwell, what's wrong? Are you ill again?"

Lilia was too worried about Finn to notice the word "again". She cried, "Dr. Sharp, can you come over? Finn suddenly has a stomachache and his face is pale."

Leukemia would cause patients to have a weak immune system and various complications.

Finn was originally weak. Today, he forced himself to drive to the airport to pick up Lilia. His body couldn't stand such a long drive.

Darwin heard Finn's illness, and his voice became serious. "Where are you now? I will get there right now."

"You don't want to go to the hospital? Are you going to die in the car? Don't you know what your physical condition is?" Brandon said in anger.

It was because Finn knew clearly about his condition that he didn't dare to go to the hospital with Lilia.

He raised his eyes and glared at Brandon fiercely. "It's none of your business! Get lost right now! Don't be an eyesore here!"

Brandon couldn't be bothered to argue with a sick person. He directly got into the driver's seat and tried to drag Finn out.

Finn struggled with all his strength. "I told you not to interfere in my business. Don't you understand?"

Lilia didn't understand why Finn, who was usually gentle, would refuse to go to the hospital as if there was a great scourge in the hospital.

"Finn, what happened to you? Aren't we just going to the hospital to see a doctor? Why are you so emotional?"

Hearing that, Finn suddenly stopped resisting. His pale face showed a look of panic.

He was afraid that things would get out of hand once he went to the hospital.

His illness could no longer be cured. All he could do was minimize the sadness of the people around him, especially Lilia.

Brandon took the opportunity to drag Finn out of the driver's seat and then quickly stuffed him into the back seat.

After that, he instructed Lilia, "Keep a close eye on your boyfriend. Don't let him run away. I'll drive you to the hospital."

Finn was in great pain, and his body was completely strengthless. He couldn't run even if he wanted to.

He leaned weakly against the back of the seat and stared at Brandon in the rearview mirror. "Don't think that you can do whatever you want just because you have gotten the goods on me."

"I'm not as despicable as you. I won't do anything to ruin other people's

Chapter 503 So Close

A moment later, with a squeal of the brakes, Brandon parked the Aston Martin at the entrance of the hospital.
He turned around and asked Finn, "Can you still walk? Do you need someone to carry you?"
Finn closed his eyes on purpose. "Stop pretending to be a good person. No one knows what trick you're playing. I won't go out."
Lilia was already angry. When she heard what Finn said, she was instantly furious.
"Finn, what are you trying to do? You hurt so much. I don't understand who you are angry with!"
Finn raised his eyes and looked at Lilia with exhaustion and pity. He muttered, "Lilia, I'm sorry making you worry."

When Lilia heard this, her eyes became wet, and tears streamed down. She turned around and wiped away the tears with the back of her hand.

Brandon said to Savanna who is sitting in the passenger's seat. "Keep an eye on him. I'll inform the medical staff."

After saying that, he got out of the car and locked the door. Then, he went to the on-duty spot to ask for help from the medical staff.

Brandon was efficient. Two minutes later, he came back with four medical staff and a stretcher.

"Where is the patient?" The medical staff opened the car door and fixed their burning eyes on Finn.

"What's going on? You look so pale. Why are you only here now?"

Lilia got out of the car with red eyes and made way for the medical staff.

Two men in white coats grabbed Finn and dragged him out.

“Ms. Parsons, what do you want to talk to me about?”

Brandon was still holding Savanna’s slender waist and his thin lips curved into a faint smile as if everything was under his control.

“Do you know something that Finn didn’t tell me?” Lilia didn’t intend to beat around the bush and went straight to the point.

“Ms. Parsons, you are right, but I don’t want to interfere in your family affairs.” Brandon lowered his head and looked at Savanna affectionately. “Other than my wife and children, I have no interest in other people’s affairs.”

“If that’s the case, why did you help us just now?” Lilia’s eyes were red and she was emotional.

“Saving a life is a good deed. Just consider it as good karma for my wife and children,” replied Brandon.

“Then why not be a truly good person and tell me the truth directly?” Lilia felt that she was about to go crazy from being kept in the dark.

“Because the matter is serious. As an outsider, I shouldn’t tell you anything. I’m sorry I can’t help you,” Brandon said as he looked at Lilia with sympathy. His facial features looked similar to Finn’s, yet their eyes were completely different.

Hearing this, Lilia felt a sharp pain in her heart.

She felt suffocated and powerless like a fish that had been thrown on the beach.

“Why? What did you hide from me? Why can’t I know the truth? What exactly happened?”

Brandon remained the same attitude. “I’m sorry, Ms. Parsons. I can’t tell you the details. If you want to know, you should ask your boyfriend.”

“Forget it. I will ask him myself.”

Lilia shouted. After that, she turned around and ran away dejected.

“Finn, I will give you one last chance. Tell me what happened.”

Lilia walked to the hospital bed and looked down at her boyfriend who had been in love with her for so long.

She grew up with him and knew him well. She was still unwilling to believe that he had lied to her.

She would rather lie to herself and believe that he did that for some reason.

“Lilia, give me some time. I will let you know the truth.”

“I want to know now. Otherwise, we will break up now,” Lilia said resolutely.

“Lilia, just give me a break. I did that for some reason.”

Finn reached out to grab his girlfriend’s hand, but she dodged.

Lilia retreated in despair, tears flowing out of her eyes. Tears left tracks on her fair and smooth face.

“Finn, since you refuse to say anything, let’s break up.”

After saying this, Lilia turned and ran out, not giving Finn, who was on the bed, any chance to stop her.

“Lilia, don’t go!” Finn struggled to sit up from the bed. The feeling of exhaustion made him helpless.

He wanted to chase after her, but he didn’t even have the strength to get out of bed.

His strength was only enough for him to reach out and overturn the instruments by the bed. The expensive electronic monitoring device was smashed on the ground, making a crackling sound.

Chapter 506 Where Are You Going?

"Don't worry, I still have my parents and brother. I won't kill myself."

Lilia pulled the corners of her mouth and smiled stiffly, looking worse than crying.

As one of the few people who knew the truth, Darwin felt very upset when he saw them like this.

He really wanted to tell Lilia the truth, but he couldn't. He couldn't say anything.

"Ms. Parsons, what do you want me to tell him? I will definitely do it." Darwin sighed.

"I bought a plane ticket to Paris tomorrow afternoon. If he still wants to be with me, come and explain it to me."

After saying this, Lilia turned and left.

She was like a patient who had just recovered from a serious illness. Her figure was lonely and desperate as if a gust of wind could blow her down.

“Ms. Parsons.” Darwin stopped her.

Lilia turned her head. Her eyes were dry, and there were no tears. But her expression looked extremely sad. “What’s wrong?”

“Where are you going? I’ll drive you,” Darwin said.

Lilia shook her head blankly. “Thank you for your kindness. My driver is waiting for me outside. If you really care about me, persuade him to come and explain it to me before noon tomorrow.”

Darwin knew how cruel the truth was, and he could not help but feel bitter.

In fact, whether he explained it or not, the result was the same. It was nothing more than pain whether she knew the truth or not.

Finn was right. Time would dilute everything. Instead of letting her face death directly, it was better to hide it from her. Maybe after a few years, she would have a new life and forget about the past.

"Mr. Orwell, Ms. Parsons is gone."

Finn saw the plane disappear from his sight with his own eyes and finally looked away.

"I know."

He hid in the crowd and saw her enter the airport with his own eyes. He saw her stubbornly waiting in the hall. In the end, she was reluctantly urged to board the plane.

Lilia was like the rose he had raised in his heart. He naturally knew what she was thinking and what she was waiting for.

If he had been healthy, he would not have let his beloved girl be so sad.

Unfortunately...

He thought he could solve everything, but he could not do anything about illness and death.

"Mr. Orwell, do you need me to arrange for someone to keep an eye on Ms. Parsons?" Gerald asked.

Usually, Finn would definitely arrange for people to keep an eye on Lilia. Even if he couldn't be by her side, he would definitely ensure her safety.

After working for Finn for so many years, Gerald knew him so well and even began to contact his people in Paris.

However, Finn shook his hand. "No need."

"Why? Are you really going to leave Ms. Parsons? Do you really want to let her go?" Gerald stopped contacting his people.

"Leave her?" Finn smiled bitterly, his pale face full of ridicule and disdain. "Do you think it's possible? If I wanted to let her go, why would I end up in such a miserable state?"

"Then why don't you find someone to keep an eye on her? What if..."

Gerald was interrupted.

“There won’t be any ifs. Nothing will happen to her, but the more I pay attention to her, the more I feel reluctant to leave her. I don’t have much time left, and I must do everything I need to do.”

"Follow him."

In the back seat of the black car, Finn's pale face was hidden in the darkness.

He had been getting seriously ill these days, and his face was almost bloodless, as pale as a sheet.

He quickly lost weight. His face, which had been angular, to begin with, was now skinny. His cheekbones were covered with a thin layer of skin as if they could break through at any time.

Gerald started the car and followed behind Brandon's car. A heart-wrenching cough came from the back seat again. The smell of blood spread in the air.

Finn coughed out blood again. The frequency of his cough recently rose sharply.

Gerald saw his increasingly pale face from the rearview mirror in the car and said with distress, "Mr. Orwell, why don't you go back? I will follow Mr. Cassel. If anything happens, I will report it to you immediately."

"No, I have to watch him myself. The right opportunity is fleeting. I don't have that much time."

Finn frowned and quickly covered his mouth with a handkerchief. This time, he vomited a large pool of blood, and the entire handkerchief was soaked.

"Mr. Orwell, let's go back to the hospital. You can't do this!" Gerald held the steering wheel tightly and even wanted to turn directly to the hospital. "Dr. Sharp said that you should stay in the hospital and recuperate now."

Finn didn't want to listen to Gerald's preaching. Finn was tortured by the illness and felt uncomfortable.

"Will being hospitalized help me get better? It's just a difference of three months and two months. It's meaningless for me to stay in the hospital and live for another month!"

The reason why Finn was fatigued by a long journey while being sick was that he wanted to arrange everything before he died.

Finn was unwilling to let his useless cousin, Daryl, be the heir to the Orwell family. He must get this problem fixed before he died.

If Finn didn't make preparations, that bastard Daryl would definitely make a move on Lilia when Finn died.

Daryl was a madman who could do anything. Finn would never allow Lilia to be threatened.

Brandon stared at the person through the mirror, watching his every move.

It was obvious that the person in the mirror also noticed his gaze.

Thus, their gazes met in the mirror.

Only then did Brandon see the person's appearance clearly. He was tall and had thin lips. His eyebrows reached his temples. His expression indicated he was scheming. It was obvious that he was not a good person.

"I've heard a lot about you. Mr. Cassel, it's a pleasure to meet you." The tall man smiled as he approached.

Even though the man called out his name, Brandon couldn't remember who he was.

However, judging from his clothes and accessories, he was definitely rich and powerful.

"I am Daryl Orwell," said the man when he sensed the doubt in Brandon's eyes.

Brandon knew he was the notorious son of the Orwell family.

Daryl was despicable. All the nasty words could describe him. Moreover, he was ruthless. Anyone would suffer once getting involved with Daryl.

Brandon frowned. He did not want to talk to Daryl. Just as Brandon was about to leave, Daryl continued, "Mr. Cassel, you are so calm. It seems you guessed I would come to find you. What? Are you interested in working with me, too?"

"I don't know what you are talking about. If you want cooperation, you can go to my company during work time. I am off work now."

After that, Brandon wanted to leave with Tye, but Daryl pestered him.

“Mr. Cassel, I don’t want to talk shop with you. We are related. You don’t know, do you?” Daryl raised his eyebrows and asked jokingly.

Finn had said that before, but Brandon hadn’t felt any discomfort. Now that he heard this from Daryl, he only felt disgusted.

Savanna was sitting in a daze. When she heard the voice, she looked up in surprise.

She saw a tall and thin man in black standing in front of her. The man was wearing a black trench coat, and his sunglasses were stuck on the collar of his T-shirt.

His eyes were long and narrow, and his lips were thin. It was uncomfortable to be stared at by him.

“Are you talking to me?” Savanna pointed at herself with a look of disbelief.

The man nodded and smiled. His smile was not friendly but rather treacherous.

“We probably don’t know each other.” Savanna felt uncomfortable around him, so she was unwilling to talk to him.

However, the man refused to give up. “You don’t know me, but I know you, Ms. Savanna Thompson.”

Hearing the man call out her name, Savanna widened her eyes, unable to hide the surprise in her eyes.

“How do you know me?”

“I am a friend of your husband. I saw you on his Instagram. Where is Mr. Cassel? Isn’t he with you?”

The tall man pretended to look for Brandon as if he had really been a friend of Brandon.

Savanna didn’t know much about his husband’s friends. She didn’t know if Daryl was really Brandon’s friend or if he was sweetening her up to cooperate with Brandon.

“I almost forgot to introduce myself. My name is Daryl Orwell.”

“Your surname is also Orwell?” Savanna immediately became alert.

Daryl smiled brightly, but it actually looked sinister.
