Lucky Collision ( Evans and Martin Robinson ) Chapter 4

Chapter 4 Getting Cheated On

When good things happened one after the other, Evans suddenly found that his waist and eyes did not hurt so much anymore.

After returning to his dorm, his three roommates were still there. None of them had gone to class.

“I will treat you guys today!”

Evans announced.

“This guy must be so sick in his head!” Larry shut off his laptop since the stock market was closed down for the day.

Elmer immediately got up, “Don’t spread your stupidity to me!”

Scott asked meekly, “Can I bring my friends with me?”

“Go ahead!”

Evans knew that he had a girlfriend now. It was a newcomer and she was a junior in their university. She had a petite frame and she was the adorable kind.

“You guys can bring your girlfriends with you.”

Since Evans was able to make some profit, he would not be stingy.

Elmer scratched his head and commented, “You’re really out of your mind, huh? Larry, call the emergency unit now!”

His three roommates all had girlfriends except him. Evans did not mind it so much because he knew that he was not good enough for the typical girls yet.

At half past five in the evening, Scott had already dressed himself well.

Larry sounded confused, “Are you treating us for real?”

Elmer muttered, “Will you bring us to eat something that is not tasty like vermicelli? I don’t feel like asking Georgie to come along, you know.”

Georgie Bowen was Elmer’s girlfriend. She studied in the Faculty of Economy and Trade.

Evans snickered, “According to my predictions, you’re going to be richer than yesterday.”

With a ringing tone, Elmer’s phone told him that he had received 1164 dollars.

What the? Elmer jumped up in disbelief. He tried to put some distance between him and Evans, “Larry, go keep the soap in the bathroom out of Evan’s reach. He’s really creeping me out. Da mn it, I won’t be able to sleep peacefully in this room tonight. I’m sleeping elsewhere.”

Larry was examining Evans with a strange look on his face, “Where did you get that money from? Wait, did Angelina pay you some compensation?”

Evans was speechless. Larry really thought that Angelina would pay Evans.

“I sold the coin that Elmer used to have.”

Evans thought that since the coin first belonged to Elmer, he would pay him a little as a sign of honor. He was not a cheap person.

Elmer finally relaxed after hearing that, “Wait, that coin can sell that much?”

“That’s right, I sold it for 13 80 dollars.”

Evans showed them the proof of his transaction. The two of them stared at his phone with their mouths hanging.

“Then, I will be the one to treat you guys tonight! Let me do it! I haven’t shown off in front of my girlfriend for a long time.”

Elmer was smug.

Of course, Evans would not let Elmer do it. After all, he still had more than one thousand and nine hundred dollars as his backup.

At half past six, everyone went to a street right behind their university.

There were entertainment spots along that street, which included BBQ shops, cafes, hotels, and even karaoke.

Larry’s girlfriend joined in too. Her name was Kiana Te igen, and she majored in accountancy. She had a slightly wide face and she had short hair.

They chose a table that was not sheltered. Evans summoned the waiter to start ordering food.

“Hey, when is Scott coming?”

As he asked that, Scott happened to appear right at the exact moment.

He had brought with him some good friends and they pulled their chairs to have a sit.

“Why don’t you book a suite? It’s not cool to sit here out in the open.”

Larry shot him an unhappy look, “Didn’t you say that you’re bringing your girlfriend?”

“She’s not around, and I just so happened to promise them a treat.”

Then, Scott turned to look at his friends, “Don’t stand on ceremony, just order whatever you want. These people are my closest friends.”

Elmer really could not stand it anymore. He wanted to leave. He would have left if it were not for his girlfriend who was also here.

Evans knew how they felt, “Hey, it’s alright.”

Since Larry also asked her girlfriend to tag along, Evans did not want the atmosphere to turn sour and it would be an unhappy ending for everyone.

At that moment, Georgia asked, “Evans, don’t you want to find a girlfriend? I have a few friends in my dorm that are quite pretty. Why not let me link them up with you?”

Scott muttered after making his order, “He can’t even pay his class fees, let alone spend money on his girlfriend.”

Elmer could not hold back anymore, “You sound like you’ve spent a lot of money on your girlfriend while you know it’s not true.”

To his surprise, Scott fired back, “Why should I spend anything on my girlfriend? I’m just fooling around with her. There’s no need to be so serious, you know.”

Both Georgia and Kiana’s faces darkened upon hearing that.

“So you just want to play around with girls?”

Larry scolded him angrily, “Hey, shut your trap! Kiana, don’t listen to him. He’s a disgusting person without any moral compass.”

He cooed, “If you don’t believe me, touch my chest. My heart always beats for you.”

Elmer and Larry were busy consoling their girlfriends.

They were angry that Scott was spewing nonsense that might destroy the dynamics of their relationship with their girlfriends.

Everyone began toasting to each other. They were waiting for the waiters to serve them the food.

When Scott saw that Martin was walking toward them with a girl, he immediately got up to greet him.

“Class president, here.”

The girl tagging along with Martin was not particularly pretty, but she was tall and she had a pair of legs to die for.

She was wearing skimpy shorts during this hot weather, which revealed his long legs.

She immediately grabbed the attention of everyone.

Scott liked to suck up to people. He pulled a chair to welcome Martin, “You guys can sit here. I will call for the waiter. Just order anything you want.”

Then, he waved his hand, "Boss, bring me two packets of cigarettes."

Elmer could not take it anymore. He knew full well that Martin and Evans were not on good terms, yet Scott ignored this fact and pretended like he was the one treating everyone here.

Elmer said sarcastically, "Scott, what a generous man you are today!"

Evans did not expect Scott to actually invite Martin. When Martin saw that Evans was here, he was obviously disgruntled and put off by Evans.

Martin looked down on people like Evans the most. He thought that Evans was just being a parasite here by getting free food.

Of course, he did not know that Evans was the one treating everyone tonight.

In fact, Martin did not hold any grudges against Evans. He was simply blindsided by his prejudice because Evans was poor.

Scott appeared to be extra accommodating the moment Martin appeared. Scott was running around and appearing to be busy as if he was the one treating Martin today. Scott kept ordering food and other stuff as if money was not an issue.

Both Georgia and Kiana gaped at him weirdly. They did not understand his behavior.

Did Scott falsely believe that he was the main host today?

The waiter came over with some cigarettes, and Scott immediately unsealed one of them. He shouted, "Feel free!"

After giving one to everyone, he kept the rest in his pocket.

Then, he unsealed the other packet and gave cigarettes to everyone again. Was Scott really taking everyone here for a fool?

Elmer could not take it anymore. He deliberately raised his glass and said, "Let's toast to our generous Scott for the meal today."

Scott who was munching on a chicken thigh suddenly launched into a fit of coughing. He kept gulping down some water to soothe his throat. He punched his chest to make sure the food did not get stuck in his throat.

He then raised his glass with a hideous expression on his face, "Let's toast to each other!"

Elmer did not know what he meant by that. Was Scott foolishly playing along?

After downing his glass, Scott could not sit still anymore. He found a chance and pulled Evans away.

"You better settle the bill later. I don't have any money on me."

“But what did you tell Martin?”

Evans had no qualms about treating everyone, but he had to make sure of one thing. Scott stuttered, “I said nothing. I just asked him to come along and have dinner with us.” Evans stared at him quizzically. Scott knew that Martin and he were not on good terms, yet Scott still went and invited Martin. Evans was curious about what Scott was scheming by doing this.

At that moment, the girl with long legs winked and asked Evans, “So you’re Evans?”
“Huh?”

Evans could not respond for a second. Georgia answered on his behalf, “That’s right, he’s Evans. What’s the matter?”

“Ugh, it’s nothing!” The girl chuckled, which invited Martin’s reprimand, “Dig into your food! Why are you asking that?”

Evans knew immediately what Martin had told his girl. Or else, a stranger would not simply be curious about another stranger for no reason.

However, Evans saw something else. A green hue was hanging above Martin’s head, indicating that he was cheated on...
