

Luna & Joshua 3069

Chapter 3069

Joshua furrowed his brow. "Well see."

Ever since Anne's death, Luna had been weighed down by her guilt toward John and was thus sensitive to any news about John's whereabouts. This was the reason she chose to come to Sharnwick

City with Joshua. She hoped to get a glimpse of John and Sammie.

If Luna found out about John's injury, she would not be able to control herself and would perhaps do something irrational.

Joshua did not intend to intrude on John's life here in Sharnwick City, and if John found out that they were here to check on him, he would be disturbed and might even get angry at Joshua for failing to honor his promise.

"Maybe we should tell her only after John's situation is better," Luke suggested.

Gwen accepted this answer, turned away, and helped bring her father downstairs.

The ambulance sped off toward the nearest hospital with its two victims, sirens blaring.

Scarface and the rest of his accomplices had finally been caught.

Luna had been up all night all this while. After getting off from a call with her children, she continued to wait patiently by the phone, awaiting good news.

Finally, after seeing the news of the kidnappers' arrest, she let out a sigh of relief and allowed herself to drift off to sleep.

Everything was finally okay. Andy had been found, and Gwen could finally be at ease too.

Otherwise...

Luna could not even begin to imagine how Gwen would feel if, less than a year after losing Luke, she lost her father too.

Luna woke up at around 9 a.m. the next morning.

She thought Joshua would have returned at night and would be sleeping next to her by the time she woke up, but to her surprise, the other side of the bed was empty.

She dialed Gwen's number and, at the same time, went over to knock on Gwen's room door.

She could not get through to Gwen's phone, and no one was in her room.

Luna could not help feeling worried about this.

'Why aren't Joshua and Gwen back yet? Didn't they find Andy last night? Where are they now?' she thought to herself as she dialed Joshua's number.

He soon picked up and said in a tone that sounded exhausted, "Hey, you're up."

Luna furrowed her brow and said rather anxiously, "Why didn't either of you come back last night?

Didn't you already rescue Andy?"

Joshua paused then replied, " Yes, we did, but there were plenty of things that we needed to sort out.

The police wanted to get a formal report, and Mr. Larson needed to go to the hospital for a checkup...

"Not only that, but there was another man who was with Mr. Larson last night, and he took a bullet for him. We're making sure that he gets checked and treated too."

At this point, Joshua decided to change the subject. "I'm at the Moore Group office now. Tara needed my help with something."

Luna frowned when she heard this. "Are you saying that after saving Gwen's father, going to the police station, and taking care of the injured man last night, you went all the way to Moore Group to help

Tara? When did you even sleep? if

What was so important about Tara's task anyway? Did it matter more than his sleep?

"Yes." Joshua nodded. "She needed my help with some financial issues. Since you're awake, I'll help you order some room service. Just stay put, and I'll be back soon. As soon as I'm done, I'll pick Gwen and Mr. Larson up from the hospital and bring them to the hotel."

Luna was annoyed to hear this. "No need! I'll go to the hospital myself!"
