

Chapter 112 | I hate disrespect

112

AMALTHEA'S POV

"Can you guys order something vegetarian for me? I will be back in a minute. I need to use the restroom," I said, and Augustus and everyone nodded as I walked out of the car towards the restaurant.

Once inside the restroom, I looked around myself before taking a deep breath and jumping out of the window, going straight towards where I saw Alven talking to some guy.

"Hey! What a pleasant surprise," I said, and as if he heard some ghost whispering in his ears, he paused in his actions before immediately turning around with a scared look in his eyes, making me sigh.

"Woah. What is with this scared look on your face? Someone might think you have seen your long tormentor or something/ Ease up a little, will you? Are you still hiding with your wife? Didn't things improve for you after the rogue head let you guys go? You said he agreed with you living alone with your life and leaving the clan after you told him who helped you, right?" I asked him, and he looked at me for a good minute before looking at the guy he was talking to, making me do the same.

"She is Amalthea Jade. I am sure you have heard plenty about her," Alven said to the guy, and I don't know if I was being paranoid again or what, but it felt like the emotions in that guy's eyes changed for a second before going back to normal.

"So you are the infamous Amalthea Jade, our boss -" The guy started, and Alven immediately elbowed him in the abdomen, making him look at Alven, and I didn't miss how he raised his brows before nodding in understanding.

"I mean to say the infamous Amalthea Jade, who has become a nuisance to our boss," the guy said, and I saw Alven releasing a breath of frustration before he shook his head.

"Hey, stop it. Let's talk some other time," Alven said, and that guy shrugged before looking at me.

0.0%

16:41

"What's the hurry? Let me talk to her for a few minutes. It's not every day that you meet an annoying one like her," He said, and I squinted my brows at his way of talking.

"Your boss? As in the rogue head? I have become a nuisance for him? Why didn't I hear anything about it? Can you enlighten me about it?" I said before looking at Alven, who looked away before bowing his head.

"Well, everyone knows you are the girl who helped Alven get out of our boss's hands. You are the one who brought his mate to him. So obviously you are quite infamous, and you became a nuisance because you are the first person who came between our boss and his subject. I am sure you intrigued him quite too much. It's a pity that I came here after promising Alven I won't talk about anything that happened today with my boss, or I would've surely called and told him you are here," that guy said, and I looked at Alven, who shook his head as if telling me to not bother with him.

"Now that I think about it, I can't help but find it pathetic. Bi*ches like you should know their places and how to not meddle with anyone's business," That guy said further, and I raised my brows before looking at Alven, who pressed his lips helplessly.

"Hey, can you keep it down? You know nothing about her. Stop spouting nonsense. It's because of her that I am finally with my mate, the love of my life. A person like you who became the reason behind the death of his mate won't understand it. So you better not speak to her like this. I might have left the rogue clan, but it doesn't mean I have become a saint," Alven said, his eyes not meeting mine, and I sighed.

Well, it's not like it's his fault. His friend is disrespectful. I can't blame him for his friend's fault. I thought before taking a deep breath to calm my raging self.

"Woah, are you taking this b*tch's side now?" That guy asked.

"Anyway, I just wanted to speak -" I started, but Alven's friend stopped me in between.

"Why? What is wrong with speaking to her like this? Isn't she the reason you left the rogue clan? I hate people like her the most. She had no reason to meddle in our business. Why did she offer your mate to you anyway? Was there some kind of help she needed? Did you give her anything in return? Was it information from the secret base? No, that can't be it. Then tell me, what is it? Were you good in bed with her?" That guy asked, and I sighed before looking at Alven, who was looking at me cautiously, making me smile.

Damn. I just wanted to talk to Alven if he knows anything about the rogues who had attacked Alpha Ace's pack all those years ago, but this pathetic man is ruining all my mood. I really hate scum like these the most.

"Come on, bi*ch. Tell me. I always wanted to know the person who helped him to get out of the rogues' clan. And now that I am looking at you, I can't help but think you are indeed a beauty. Did he do you some favors for you to help him? Why don't you answer me? Was he good in bed? I bet I am better. Do you want to try it with me?" He said, making me close my eyes as I was trying my best to calm myself.

"Why are you not answering? Why did you close your eyes? Are you thinking about it?" He said before placing his hand on my shoulder, and I immediately opened my eyes in disgust.

"Are you done talking to him?" I asked, and Alven nodded.

"Why are you talking to him and not me? I am asking you a question, you wh*re!" That guy asked in a frustrated tone, and I smiled before looking at him.

"Are you not going to remove your hand?" I asked, and he shook his head with a grin on his face, making me sigh before I took out my dagger and plunged straight through that guy's abdomen, making Alven gasp loudly as he took a step back from me.

Twisting the dagger inside his body, I sighed before taking out my dagger and wiping it with the wet wipe I always carry with me.

"You-uu!" That guy murmured in pain and difficulty as he coughed blood, and I sighed.

"I really hate it when people disrespect me. You should've listened to Alven when he said you know nothing about me, and you should keep your mouth shut because of it," I said before kicking his body, making his body roll down the cliff.

Wiping my hands with another wipe, I looked at Alven, who was looking at me with sweat beads on his forehead.

"Luna Jade, what did you do? He was one of the chief men of the rogue head. He was -"

"Don't be afraid. I am just here to ask you about something," I said.

"I don't know anything about it. I am sorry. He made me do it. Please don't blame me. He said he would kill my mate if I didn't agree with his words, and that's why I did it. Please don't kill me. My mate is waiting for me at our house. Please," Alven said, and I sighed, not understanding why he was acting like this.

"Hey, I am not here to kill you or -" I couldn't even complete my words when he fell to the ground, making me bite my lips as I didn't understand what he was on about.

"Please spare my life. Please let me go. I can't bear losing my life. My mate has no one in this world apart from me," He begged, and I tilted my head before looking at him closely.

Is he really so scared because I killed that guy? I don't know why, but as believable as it sounds, I feel like there is something fishy about it.

He has seen me killing people before too and in worse ways. Then why the hell is he having such a strong reaction today? It feels like he knows he has done something to offend me and is scared that I have found out about it.

Is it about the information I asked him to send me? Was that information not complete?

Or am I looking too much into things? I thought before taking a deep breath.

"I thought you went to the washroom. What are you doing here?" I heard Augustus behind me, and I sighed, feeling awkward as I turned around before looking at him helplessly.

"I...I -"

"Did you run out of the bathroom from the window?" He asked me with raised brows, and I pressed my lips into a thin line, feeling like a kid caught in action.

"I, well, it's not what it looks like," I said, and he raised his brows at me, making me sigh.

