AMALTHEA'S POV

"Augustus," I whispered, feeling shy at his words, and he turned towards me before holding my hand.

"Am I wrong?" He asked me, and out of the corner of my eyes, I looked at his friend, who was looking between Augustus and me.

"Hmm?" Augustus asked again, and I looked into his eyes before smiling at him, wanting him to see what was going on in my heart through my eyes.

"I don't think so," I said, and he raised his brows partially before bending towards me, and I thought he was going to kiss me, but rather than that, he placed his face in the crook of my neck.

"Thank you. I know you did it so that I don't feel ashamed in front of my friend," Augustus whispered, and I felt my fingers getting cold at his words.

I don't know what hurts more. The fact that he didn't believe my words and couldn't see the emotions and seriousness in my eyes or the fact that I ignored his confession and had never given him a good answer for so long, that now that I am hinting at it, he can't believe it.

"I don't mind becoming your wife in the future though," I whispered again to make him realize, and as if shocked by my words, he turned to look at me, his face only an inch away from mine, making me look into his eyes.

Smiling at him gently, I shrugged slightly before kissing his cheeks.

"I -uhh, why are you guys making me feel like I am intruding on you?" Augustus's friend said, and I thought Augustus would distance himself from me, but rather than that, he took a deep breath before placing his forehead on my shoulder.

"Augustus, what's wrong?" I asked, and he shook his head before pulling me in for a hug.

"Nothing's wrong. Everything is perfect," He said, and I didn't know if I made a good decision in saying those words or if I was feeling this because I expected a greater reaction from him, but seeing him so calm, I felt a bit regretful.

"Trevor, I will give you a proper introduction and let you have some time with her so you can clear your doubts later. We will take our leave now. Take good care of Scarlett. I'll come back tomorrow to check on her," Augustus said before he pulled me out of the corridor into the lift.

He looked at me before sighing, and I was about to press the button on the ground floor when he pressed the top floor button, making me look at him in question.

When he didn't say anything or looked like he wanted to say what it was all about, I sighed before looking ahead.

Once we were on the top floor, he took me towards the stair before leading me to the terrace.

Looking down from the railings, I turned to look at Augustus, who was looking at me with some mysterious emotions.

"What was that all about?" He asked, and I realized it wasn't Augustus who was in control. Kyle has taken over.

Looking at him gently, I smiled at him before walking toward him.

"What do you want to ask? Can you be a little more specific?" I said, and he held my chin, lifting my face slightly as he looked at me.

"What did you mean when you said you don't mind being my wife? Was it because I joked about it with my friend, and you were just helping me so that I don't feel about it, or did you really- did you really mean it?" Kyle asked me, and I smiled.

"Look into my eyes and find your answer yourself," I said.

"Don't play games with me, Amalthea. I am serious today," he said, and I shrugged.

"And do you think I am joking?"

"Can you not say it?" He asked, and I removed his hand from my chin before turning around as my heart started pounding again.

I don't know if I would be able to say those words if I kept looking into his drowning eyes.

"Honestly, I had never thought I would be saying this to anyone ever again. After losing my trust last time, I lost my hope in love too. It was difficult for me to trust someone again, but you and Augustus made me realize that maybe I had just chosen the wrong person. It has nothing to do with this emotion called love," I said before walking towards the railing.

"Time after time, you guys showed me what it feels like to be loved and cared for, and for the first time after my dad died, I felt protected in someone's embrace. You gave me that sense of protection. You understand me more than anything and anyone in this world. You don't pressurize me into things, but you keep pushing my limits," I said before smiling.

"You say I challenge your authorities as the Lycan king because I don't agree and obey you ever, but you are no different. You have made me question my morals and plans. I had thought I would live my life alone or maybe in the council chambers if I wasn't able to take back my pack after my revenge plan. My plan had no flaws. There was no space for any love or any related emotion," I chuckled.

"Do you believe that I was kind of curious about you too? When you said you love me and would wait for me, and all you needed was time and patience from me and especially when you showed me what unconditional love felt like, I felt it. Do you know there was a time I started hating you too? Hating you for making my emotions quiver and my heart beat faster every time you were near?" I asked before turning to look at him.

"All those things aside, when I stayed away from you for three days and saw you in the council chambers again, I knew I was done for. The way you danced with me, how you got jealous, and especially how you tended toward me. Your promises to protect me and your possessiveness, everything started making me look at you in a newer light. You are a very good King Kyle. And I had never thought I would say something like this in my life ever again," I took a deep breath before walking toward him.

Holding his hand in mine with my other hand placed on his heart, I looked into his eyes before smiling, looking at him with everything I was feeling right now.

"I think I am ready to have a marriage again if it's you," I said and he looked at me monotonously for a few seconds before falling on his knees and taking a deep breath.

"Augustus," I started but he shook his head at me.

"Don't speak anything else. You have said enough. You have pulled the strings of my heart enough," He said and I bit my lips as he suddenly pounced on me and hugged my abdomen.

"You have no idea how happy I feel right now. I know it's not an I love you confession, but this is more than I can ask for. The fact that you are ready to name your whole life with me is more than I could've wished for," he said and I sat on my knees before looking into his eyes.

"It's because you made me realize what a gem and caring man I would lose if I delay any longer. Saying these things today was not in my plans, Kyle. I wanted to wait for the right time, but I guess sometimes, the most random timings sound the best?" I asked and he nodded before I closed my eyes when I started smelling his scent again, making my canines hurt.

"No wonder Augustus said you are aroused. It was your acceptance for us. I felt that too. And now that you have said these words yourself, I can't be any happier," he said to me before hugging me seeing his neck up so close to my face, I growled as it was becoming hard for me to control my emotions and he suddenly distanced from me before raising his eyebrows when he saw my elongated canines.

"Crystal?" Kyle said and I widened my eyes when he took my wolf's name.

What the hell is happening? I thought.

"This is not good. Crystal! Get a grip on yourself! You know this is not the right time! You'll kill her at this rate! If you wanted to take over like this, then you shouldn't have hidden it from her in the first place!" The siren voice in my head shouted and I felt my head getting heavy at her words.

What is not the right time? Why is she talking like that? Does she know my wolf? And what has been hidden from me? I thought as my vision started to blur, darkness taking over me.
