

Chapter 132 Daniel and his flirting

132

AMALTHEA'S POV

"So? How is his sister now?" Sam asked me, and I raised my brows before squinting when I noticed his gaze behind me.

Turning around, I looked at Augustus, who entered the restaurant, looking as dashing as ever. Feeling my heart melt at his appearance as he looked like a mafia boss dressed like that, I couldn't help but smile, feeling shy for no reason.

Didn't he say he had a meeting? Why is he here? I thought before turning back to Sam, who looked at me with an amused expression.

"Yes, his sister is fine now. We are glad we saved her, and her baby is also alright," I said, and Sam nodded at me.

"What's with that goofy smile on your face?" Daniel, his elder brother, asked me, and I tilted my head as I looked at him.

He still has that mysterious aura around him, no? I know that it's mostly because he speaks less and his actions are always unpredictable, but there is something about him that makes one curious and want to know everything about him. His blue eyes look like they would drown you in their mysteries if you look for too long.

"If you kept looking at him for longer, I would take that as a yes. That you are finally ready to get into a relationship with him," Sam joked, and I rolled my eyes when Daniel scoffed, not saying anything nonetheless.

Looking to my left from the corner of my eyes, I noticed Augustus sitting with a few men, and I couldn't help but smile when I saw him turning towards me.

"Anyway, how are things going? I haven't heard from you for so long," I said to start the conversation and divert it, and Daniel looked at me with a curious expression, but the smirk on his face was making him look a bit arrogant.

If it would've been anybody else, they might have thought that he was being arrogant, but I know he meant nothing wrong. It's his relaxed face.

I have asked him to even his expression into a more approachable one, and he always says it's a bother.

"I missed you," Daniel said without giving it a thought, and I raised my brows before smiling.

"Yeah? What did you miss about me?"

"Everything. I missed your presence around me. You know what I feel about you, don't you? You are more than my friend to me. Not to mention how you wooed me with your handmade food," Daniel said as if he was talking to someone else about his crush, and I couldn't help but snigger at his facial expression.

"Really, Daniel? Do you think I wooed you with my food? Wasn't it my extraordinary beauty and authority? You like dominant girls, don't you?" I asked, and he unbuttoned the second button of his shirt, making me look down before I met his gaze, his dark eyes making me smile.

"Guys, we are in a public restaurant. Can you stop this flirting? You both can make a grown man like me feel shy. Someone will think you will throw yourselves at each other at any moment. I can't believe you guys would make me feel like a third wheel here. How can you guys do that to me?" Sam asked, and I chuckled before looking at him.

"Why don't you blame your brother for that? He is always flirting with me even when he knows there's nothing possible between us," I said, and Daniel raised his brows before bending towards me.

"And? Care you explain why nothing can happen between us? It's not like Blake is in the picture anymore. You liked him at that time, I got it. But as far as I know, you are not into him anymore," Daniel said, and I sighed.

"You have a mate out there. Do I look like the kind of person who would go for a man with a mate after being betrayed by a man who left me for his mate? Besides, I am still married to that jerk," I said, and Daniel scoffed.

"You very well know I don't believe in second chance mates. Believe it or not, my mate died when I was 18. I wasn't even able to hold her in my arms. Since then, I have found no one even when I travel so much. What if the moon goddess didn't really gift me a second chance mate? It's all your speculation," Daniel said with a glint in his eyes.

"You know how I have felt about you even when you were with Blake. I kept my boundaries because I didn't want to make you uncomfortable. Sam, why don't you say something?" Daniel said, and Sam rolled his eyes.

"Well, to inform you. I called her here so that we all could catch up. I didn't call her so that you could ask me to play matchmaker. Besides, I hardly believe she'll agree with you. You know how she is. Once she sets her mind to something, there is nothing we can do unless she has a change of heart herself," Sam said, and I smiled.

"Well, it was a nice try. I told you I would keep trying until you will find a decent man for yourself. That's why I always bullied you with my constant pestering, even when Blake was around. Everyone apart from you could see his negativity. I want the best for you," Daniel said as he held my hand, and I smiled before nodding and taking my hand out of his grip.

"Well, lucky for you. You can stop now. I have indeed found someone for me. He cares for me, treats me like a queen, loves me like my father, lusts for me like a husband, shows me around like a boyfriend, protects me like a brother, and more than that, he respects me more than anything else. I like him a lot too," I said with a smile before looking at Augustus from the corner of my eyes.

Seeing him busy with the people he was meeting with, I sighed, taking a breath of relief.

I don't know why, but I would've felt a bit embarrassed if he had heard these words.

"Really? And when are you planning to tell us about him?" Daniel asked, and I thought I would see some kind of anger in his eyes, but rather than that, he had pure happiness, and I smiled at it.

I indeed made good friends.

"You'll meet him once I am done with my other plans and have settled everything with him. I am sure it will be soon," I said, and I noticed Augustus smiling at my response, making me smile in return.

"Anyway, I'll take my leave now. Why don't you come to the council chambers next week? We are celebrating Uncle's birthday," I said, and Daniel nodded.

"Anything for you, sweetheart. This time around, we'll make sure to be there. After all, I'll get to steal your first dance," Daniel said, and I chuckled at his response before standing.

Nodding at them as they both took my hands and kissed the back of them, making me chuckle at their chivalry, I waved my hand at them before leaving the restaurant.

Chapter 132 Daniel and his flirting

+120 Points at most

"Where do you think you are going without me?" I heard his voice behind me, and I smiled before shaking my head.

"I know you'll come soon. Let's go back?" I said, and he nodded.

"Of course, I have a lot of pending work to attend to," he said with a meaningful look, and I looked away from his piercing gaze.

