

Chapter 13 - The Unworthy Sale Attendants

After they finished eating their meals and allowed them to settle down, James told the father and daughter duo to follow him, and they left the restaurant.

"Where do you live?" James faced the little girl that was currently busy glancing here and there.

With her tiny voice, she replied; "I and father live in hun... hun...."

The little girl entered a deep thought, her eyes squinted together, making her look extremely cute.

She probably does not know how to describe where they live.

James could only turn to face the armless middle-aged man who has kept mute from the beginning.

"Sir, I know you might not want to owe me much, or you might be thinking I've gotten some objective or motives in mind for everything I've been doing...."

The man suddenly raised his head to stare at James' face, his face completely blank, that one would not know what he was thinking.

"I swear, my mind is very clean, okay? and I would beg you, for your daughter's sake, let me make her dreams come true."

The man's face instantly furrowed together, his eyes staring unblinkingly into James' eyes.

After a while, the man finally looked down, and guilty covered his face.

"I'm sorry for doubting your purpose of helping me, sir."

Head bowed, the man apologized honestly.

It is not that the man does not want to be helped.

To be honest, he felt so guilty toward his daughter, for the sort of life he is giving her.

He would not mind doing anything he could to give her a happy and stress-free life, the life she want.

In fact, he had done everything he could to get a job so that his daughter would not suffer after his arms got amputated, unfortunately, nobody would employ him.

They were all saying the same thing, that he is useless.

After that, he begged many friends and relatives to only help his daughter, so that she would not suffer with him, unfortunately, everybody only gave him empty promises.

Now, a complete stranger he has never met before in his entire life, whose age is younger than his by at least two decades is offering to help them.

This is why the man thought James has some objective in mind for trying to help them, but the moment he saw James' expression and heard what he said, he realized he was the one that had misunderstood James.

He truly only wants to offer his help with no objective in mind.

In this world, some people are natural givers that would not stand on ceremony, and this boy seemed to be one of them.

When James saw the man's expression, he instantly sighed in relief as he knew the man has finally dropped every defense against him.

Honestly, James does not blame him at all, in fact, he felt that the man's character is quite commendable.

Someone else would have instantly jumped to accept his offer without caring about whatever comes in return.

"Nice..... Let's go buy a small apartment first, to make one of your daughter's dream comes true."

Even before James could finish what he was saying, the middle man raised his head to glance at him in shock.

Never in his entire life had he thought buying a house would be part of the help James wanted to render them.

He felt shocked and scared at the same time.

The middle-aged man knew how expensive houses cost here in this city, so he knew what James would be letting go of if he was to buy one for them.

He opened his mouth several times to convince James to do otherwise, but he was unable to get any words out.

He knew James has already made up his mind to buy them the house.

The man turned to glance at his daughter whose face has already widened and was smiling excitedly at this moment.

He suddenly felt like crying tears of joy.

After many years of suffering, someone has finally reached out to help them.

"It's okay, that's not all we would be doing today, we will also go enroll your daughter into a school, and do some more things."

James also smiled happily at this moment when he saw how excited the little girl is.

The moment she heard all the promises James mentioned, the little girl literally began to jump excitedly around.

"Dad... we would have our own house, and I will go to school...."

It might be because of how joyful she felt at this moment, but she does not notice at all the hot tears that suddenly fell from her father's eyes.

"Two of my dreams are coming to reality... yah....."

The girl was so excited at this moment that it looked like she has received the greatest gift in her entire life.

Seeing how joyous his daughter was, the middle-aged man also smiled from the bottom of his heart for the first time in many years amidst his tears.

He suddenly felt someone patting him on his shoulder.

Raising his head, he realized that James is currently giving him an encouraging smile.

"It's okay...."

The man stared unblinkingly at James, not knowing how to thank him.

The only thing he has to offer at this moment is kneeling to him, but he knew it would be so unfair.

How could he only offer to kneel in return for all he was about to receive?

James flagged an incoming taxi which immediately parked before them.

He opened the back door so that the father and daughter duo could enter after which, he also board.

James suddenly raked his brain, trying to remember the real estate company he saw while coming here today.

On his way here from the uni, James intentionally glanced out through the taxi's window, searching for a real estate company.

He knew he would buy a house sooner or later, so he thought it would be better to know where they sell first.

Who would have thought that the first house he would be buying would not be for himself?

"Take us to Ka Real Estate..."

James told the driver who instantly ignited the engine.

Ten to twenty minutes later, the taxi parked in front of the building, then James paid and the trio alighted.

The moment they entered the building, they were met by several girls that sat expectantly and were busy looking toward the entrance.

When these girls saw the people that entered, they automatically ignored them, thinking the same thing in their minds; 'These people shouldn't be customers.'

Well, it's not exactly their fault for thinking like that.

With how malnourished and poor James, the middle-aged man, and the little girl is, nobody would think they would be capable of buying a house.

Not knowing that the attendants have automatically seen them as poor and broke fellas, James walked towards the nearest desk, to a girl whose eyes are still busy staring at the entrance.

"Hello, please we want to buy a house."

James said respectfully to the girl.

The moment he finished saying that, everybody in the building instantly glanced at him in shock, which later turned to disdain before glancing away.

'How could these people be able to afford the house we sell?'

Thinking it would be a waste of time for them, they all turned back to look towards the entrance.

James instantly saw the disdain in their eyes and suddenly understood them.

'I'm being looked down upon again!'

He scratched his head in embarrassment and glanced at himself all over.

He suddenly felt that he couldn't blame them.

"Let's go somewhere else."

Although he does not blame them, that does not mean he would stay.

These people are not worthy of being attendants, or even employees.

As attendants, shouldn't they attend to all customers, irrespective of what they came here for?

Just as James was about to turn back and leave, he heard a shy voice.

He and everybody in the building instantly turned their head toward the source, and they saw a girl with huge glasses on her face staring at James awkwardly.

The instant the remaining girls saw who it was, they all hissed in contempt and glanced away, not wanting to waste their time.

They all felt that the girl is just a squander of resources.

'She would be fired today anyways, perhaps that's why she is too dumb to know who is buying and who is not buying a house.'

The moment James saw the reaction the girl garnered, a thoughtful smile suddenly appeared on his face.

He realized that this cute girl is hated by everybody.

"Sir, please come and check which house you are interested in."

The still-shy girl called out respectfully to James and stood up.

Smiling towards the middle-aged man, James lifted his leg and walked towards the girl.

"Please sir, you can have your seat."

James could tell how shy and awkward the girl is at this moment, but he said nothing.

Although he does not know why or what's going on, he knew this girl would shock her colleagues today.

He told the middle-aged man to seat which he hurriedly decline.

Helplessly, James could only seat himself down.

He turned the booklet towards himself and began to glance through it.

James saw many buildings; mansions, duplexes, and many more.

The prices also range from high to low.

It must be known that the lowest price of a house here is about 3 million dollars.

Thankfully, the middle-aged man is not seeing this right now, else he would have told James not to bother himself anymore.

How would he have the nerve to accept something like this?

James finally stopped at a particular building whose picture looked like a house in fairytale movies.

He showed it to the little girl whose eyes instantly began to shine with blinding light.

"Can you show me this?"

James pointed the house of his choice to the shy girl who instantly became stunned.

Although she was trying her best to make a sale today, or else she would be fired, she did not have much expectation, so when she saw James picking a building of $7,000,000, she became stunned.

It's not that she thought James couldn't afford to buy the house as she's not good at judging people by appearance, she just felt that she was dreaming.

Or else, how would she be making such a huge sale today, which would have been her last day at work?

"Yes sir... yes sir, I will take you there right now."

Scared that her customer would be snatched away from her like always, the girl instantly stood up and took a bunch of keys from her desk drawer.

"Please follow me, sir."

Everybody was busy staring curiously at her and James at this moment.

They so much wish to know which building James picked, they also want to know if he would buy it or not.

big sale: 100 bonus free fou you get it