

Chapter 14 - Buying A House For Lola

Thankfully for James and his party, the girl with huge glasses has her car, a small pink car.

James and his party could only cramp into the pink car which was then driven by the girl to a suburban district where there are a lot of nice and beautiful houses.

The instant they got to their destination, James and his party became deeply stunned by what they saw.

Although the building is not huge, it is truly the definition of beautiful.

Just as if it was taken out of a cartoon, it sat there elegantly.

"So beautiful," the little girl muttered dreamily.

Although the building looked like an animated building, it is by no means childish.

Just more like a girlish house, with its bright colors.

The attendant with huge glasses on her face also stared dreamily at the building in her front at this moment, almost becoming sad that it is finally going to be sold out.

This is her dream house we are talking about.

"Please, come in sirs..." She unlocked the entrance door and invited James and his party in.

"This door could also open automatically once it sensed someone registered in it coming," she said to the two grown-up men, especially to the armless man, in particular, making them stunned.

It was as if the door was made for people who do not have arms like the middle-aged man here.

The house was an imitation of a fantasy world.

Its inside was decorated like the beautiful world of elves, making the little girl's eyes widen in amazement.

She knew at this moment that it would become her nightmare for eternity if she couldn't get this house.

The little girl couldn't help but turn her attention towards James and inquired cutely; "Uncle, is this little Lola's house from now on?"

James who has also become engrossed by how natural the house looked couldn't help but turn towards the girl when he heard her tiny and cute voice.

'So her name is Lola....'

He walked towards her and ruffled her hair playfully.

"Yes, Little Lola, this would be your house from now on, do you like it?"

"Yah..... I love it, uncle, I love it sooo much....."

The girl jumped happily the instant she heard James' response.

She finally felt relieved and excited.

Standing by the side and also amazed by what he was seeing, the armless man couldn't help but open and close his mouth severally.

He wanted to say something, but it wouldn't come out of his mouth no matter how much he tried.

He was not a novice in buildings, so he has naturally noticed that the houses in this district must definitely cost fortunes the moment they entered the suburban area, but when they got to this particular building and entered, he became lost for words.

He knew instantly that this house is something he could never dream of buying even if he began to save $100,000 every year throughout the remaining of his life, that is if his body was whole.

It must be known that $100,000 per year for an average family is quite a lot.

So how could he that couldn't even save money for food be able to save for a house?

He knew at this moment that there is nothing in this life he could do to pay back for what James is doing for him now.

Not even if he gives his life to him.

The man suddenly began to thank his lucky stars and fortune in his head, thanking them for making him go to the place where he met James yesterday.

A single tear dropped right from his eyes as he began to remember everything he has gone through all these years, before and after his arms got amputated.

"Shouldn't we go check out everywhere now that we've seen enough of here?"

Not noticing that the armless man behind them is already tearing up, James said to the little girl whose eyes are still completely bright.

The girl instantly nodded her head furiously, probably already waiting for James to say that.

Led by the girl with huge glasses, James, Lola, and the middle-aged man checked out every inch and corner of the building, and none of the things they saw disappointed them.

The building does not have many bedrooms, only four.

A master bedroom, 2 for the children and one for the visitors.

It has a drawing room, kitchen, dining room, and a nice garden behind which contains many strange plants.

"How do we finalize the deal."

James inquired the attendant that brought them when he saw the urgency and unwillingness to leave on the little girl's face.

"We will need to return to the office first to do that, sir," the attendant looked at James with veneration and respect in her eyes.

Commented [Ma1]:

She isn't exactly dumb, so she already realized what was going on here.

After hearing James and Lola's discussion, and seeing the middle-aged man's expressions, she already realized that James was the one buying the building.

Not for himself, but to gift it out.

Even she that does not know how to judge people by their looks and appearance has already realized that James must not be ordinary.

She knew how huge seven million dollars is, for someone to just gift it out like that....

Even people related by blood could not do that to each other.

Every one of them boarded the little car again and finally returned to the real estate company.

When those inside saw James and his group returning, they instantly turned their attention fully focused on them curiously.

They all did not expect that James and his party would still shamelessly come back after wasting their stupid colleague's time and effort.

'She Deserves this,' they all thought happily.

After James and his group left earlier, the remaining attendants in the office began to say many disgusting and scornful words behind their backs.

None of the attendants think James would be able to afford to buy a house they all thought he might be someone who wanted to show off, or take pictures.

"Sir, could you seat for some moment so that I could print out the land and house documents."

"What?!" The attendants screamed out in alarm when they heard this.

They couldn't help but cover their mouths with their hands when they realized they had screamed out.

In shock, they watched as their colleague printed out a bunch of papers from her computer.

"Sign here sir."

James picked up the bunch of documents and read through them.

Not that he was reading them though, as he would not be able to understand all the legal or no legal stuff written in them.

What he was actually doing was begging the arrogant system to help him out.

[Host shouldn't disturb the system's nap, okay?]

James became stunned when he heard this.

This is the first time he would be hearing that systems also sleep.

'I'm sorry for disturbing your nap Mr. System, but could you please spare me some seconds and go through these documents for me?'

[One word, NO!]

'Please....'

[No!]

'Pretty please!'

[No!]

This went on like that for several minutes.

Just as James was about to give up, and read what he could, the system finally gave in, telling James there is nothing wrong with the documents, and that he could directly sign them.

James instantly felt like choking the system to death if it has life.

He stood up and told the little girl; Lola to seat down, making everybody, the middle-aged man Included to glance at him with questioned-filled eyes.

"Can she sign, the house belongs to her?"

"Ye... ye... Yes sir, she can."

The girl with huge glasses on hurriedly nodded her head.

She already knew what was going on, so she wasn't shocked for a long time when she heard James' question.

That is for her.

As for everybody else in the huge office right now, their eyes have become so huge and round at this moment, that they looked like they would fall off if they were not attended to.

'Is he buying a house for that little girl?'

"Sir, before the documents could be signed, could you please make payments first."

This is what the remaining girls in the office had been waiting for.

They would finally know if truly, James could afford to buy a house here or not.

Every one of them stared at James hard without blinking even a bit, scared that they would miss important details if they were to blink even for a millisecond.

James nodded his head and brought out his credit card.

"I would be debiting $7,005,000, the tax included."

Everybody's brain instantly stopped working for a second, the middle-aged man included.

He had thought of various prices in his head, but none of them could come even a bit close to the price the attendant just mentioned.

He began to count in his head, but he was unable to.

He could only stare blurry at James at this moment, his eyes filled with tears.

James entered his pin, then the girl returned his card to him, and told him the transaction has become successful.

The moment the remaining attendants heard this, they began to feel a great sense of regret crash heavily upon them.

Every one of them began to cry tears of sadness in their mind as they remembered how they just lost a great customer. Especially the girl James went to after entering the other time.

She felt that she would bleed to death internally at this moment as her eyes became completely red.

She tried all her best to control the tears that were about fall from them right now, but unfortunately, she was unable to.

Had she and the remaining attendants not taken James lightly, they would have been the ones attending to him by now.

Apart from the girl that was already crying, the remaining girls also began to try their best to control the hot tears of regret that wanted to spill from their eyes, unfortunately for most of them, they were unable to do that.

They all knew at this moment that they have lost something they would never be able to get back again in their life.

"That's seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars commission for goodness sake!"

They all screamed in their mind.

Not caring about this, James asked for thumb-printing ink, so that the little girl could sign in the documents.

After that was done, the company was given their copies of the documents, while James took the copies that belong to Lola now, he also took over all the keys that accessed the house.

The attendant who has begun to smile widely and happily at this moment instantly stood up to escort James and his party out.

Only God knew how excited she is at this instant, all thanks to the fact that she does not know how to judge by appearance.

"Now that we are done here, let's go find the school nearest to your new house so that we could register you."

James said lovingly to the little girl whose smile at this moment could soften the most villainous heart in the world.

"Sir... this... this is, isn't this being a little too much?!"

The armless man finally could not control himself anymore.