

Chapter 113 Humiliation From Her Stepmother

Mabel had purchased a ton of jewelry and dressed ostentatiously ever since she moved in with Adrien.

Cerissa was also very well-dressed.

She didn't look like Adrien, but she looked like a copy and paste of Mabel.

Because of this, Adrien really adored Cerissa and believed that she was an exact replica of his sweetheart.

They were laughing and conversing as they walked out side by side.

The first person to notice Celia was Cerissa. "My dear sister, why are you back?" she said in amazement.

Celia disregarded her. She seemed unconcerned, even failing to stare at her.

Cerissa was reminded of the embarrassment she had felt when she had been slapped by Celia in front of a large crowd in Davina. Cerissa purposefully spoke loudly because she intended to make Celia suffer this time. "Why didn't you let me know in advance that you were returning, my dear sister? Where is your husband? Why didn't you bring him along? Do you believe he lacks presentability? Please don't think so. We are all related. We'll try our best to like him."

Celia sneered at her stupidity and said, "I'm here to talk to Adrien."

When Mabel heard this, she started moving in the direction of Celia.

She showed off the most recent Hermes bag in front of Celia. "Cece, your father gave me this bag as a gift. Can we check it out together? Is it superior to the purses your mom previously carried?"

Although Celia ignored her, Mabel persisted in bothering her. With a grin, she added, "I'm about to take your sister out for a blind date. This time, the man is a nobleman and a member of the Yates family in the north of the city. You ought to be familiar with him. He is successful and attractive. Despite his young age, he has a net worth of more than one hundred million."

She was babbling, and Celia didn't want to hear it. "I'm here for Adrien," she muttered icily as she turned her head away.

Mabel ignored Celia's words and instead said with a grin on her flawless face, "I said that to let you know that Tyson is not comparable to the person who is on a blind date with your sister. You'd better stick close to Tyson and don't mess around! Keep in mind that you can only wed someone your sister doesn't want!"

"Really? What of it?"

Celia wasn't fond of threats. In a mocking voice, she said, "The blind date has not yet begun. How can you tell whether the man approves of Cerissa or not? You are in such a rush to brag. You act as if she will marry him and become the young hostess of that affluent family tomorrow."

Mabel's exquisite makeup failed to cover her dejected expression as she heard this.

"Where's your sense of decency?"

She was ready to scream in rage, but she refrained from doing it after giving it some consideration. "How is the health of your husband? When is his miserable life going to end?"

Celia finally became angry.

"My husband is excellent in every way. I'll give you a lesson if you dare to blabber on again!"

When Mabel heard Celia's response, she intended to reprimand her but Cerissa intervened.

"Don't put yourself on the same level as my sister, Mom. She has been much too miserable for so long. She recently wedded an ugly, impoverished loser. Her life is even more miserable now."

Cerissa was acting like a thoughtful person. Mabel softly squeezed her daughter's cheek and whispered, "Why am I blessed with a kid who is so lovely and compassionate? Even though you pity her, when has your sister been considerate of you?"

Mabel snorted and put her hand down. "But Cerissa, you're correct. She is such a worthless lady, and I don't want to deal with her."

Celia revealed a scowl. "If it weren't for the Shaw family's investment, the Kane Group wouldn't have been able to survive the crisis! You all are such slackers. Without the Kane Group, what can you accomplish? This time, The Kane Group came dangerously close to going bankrupt, right? Well, who's the worthless lady here?"

Mabel was irate to the core. She moved forward and wanted to hit Celia in the face regardless of how that would make her look like.

"How dare you say that the Kane Group is going bankrupt? You scoundrel! You're really disrespectful to the Kane Group! Have you forgotten you are also a Kane?"
