

Chapter 301 The Disturbance At The Dinner Table

When Tyson heard Doreen had disparaged his mother, his demeanor became gloomy. His words were as icy as the peak of a mountain.

"Doreen, please quit slandering without evidence, and don't implicate my mom!"

Celia saw that Tyson was upset and held his hand.

Doreen only snorted and said, "Your mother was merely your father's mistress, so why are you so arrogant in my presence? Your father had sex with many women over the years, but only your mother did something to get pregnant.

Your father and grandfather were kind enough to take her and you in, but what did you do? The Shaw family treated her so well, but she wasn't happy. She wanted to hurt Mack and my child."

As Doreen continued to speak, her mood gradually deteriorated. Finally, she buried her face in her hands and sobbed uncontrollably.

"Don't weep. Don't worry about it. We can have another kid in the future," Mack, who felt sorry for her, reassured her.

Doreen pushed him away furiously after hearing this, saying, "Have another kid? A miracle will happen? Do you know that the doctor stated it would be difficult for me to become pregnant again in the future since I had a miscarriage and my uterus was damaged seriously? It's all the fault of Tyson's wretched mother!"

As Mack looked thoughtfully at Tyson, he remarked, "Well, don't be furious. After all, his mother is dead. We don't deal with the dead, do we?"

He avoided Hobson's gaze entirely. Instead, he gave Tyson a defiant stare, as if the remarks had been said on purpose.

Tense and determined, Tyson did his best to restrain his rage. "My mother was a kind-hearted woman. Your pregnancy termination had nothing to do with my mother, and you have no proof of how you're making her come out."

Doreen raised an accusing chin and said, "Kind-hearted? If so, how did she end up being your dad's mistress?"

As a result, Tyson gave out a displeased expression. He understood that Danilo had tricked his mother. The fact that Danilo had married was not known to his mother when she first fell in love with him.

Rosalie interjected him as a peacemaker just as he was going to defend his mother.

With a pout, she got to her feet. She stated in the tone of a family hostess, "Stop bickering already! It's not everyday that Hobson comes back. Let's sit down and have a lovely meal. Don't create a fuss."

She sent a thoughtful glance in Tyson's direction before saying, "Since I was also out shopping with Doreen at the time, and I didn't witness Tyson's mom push Doreen, I believe she didn't do it."

She comforted Doreen, patting her on the shoulder, "I know you can't let it go, but you have to have the proof to accuse someone. Time has flown by since then. Let's not talk about it again. I'll find the finest doctor at home and abroad to cure you. And don't forget to stay in good shape."

Doreen was forced to shut up and sit next to Mack at her mother-in-law's statements.

Hobson's expression relaxed somewhat after that. "You've been married to our family for so long. Why don't you learn to be as sensible as your mother-in-law?"

Doreen had intended to drop the issue. But after hearing this, she said, "I only stated the truth. But you can't tolerate it. Some people like to harm others secretly, and you adore such people very much."

Hobson pounded on the table in anger, his body shivering. "You're not going to quit until you really annoy me, are you, Doreen?"

