

Chapter 484 A Sharp-tongued Bitch

Standing next to Alita, Celia looked at the family of three with a cold intensity in her narrowed eyes. She wanted to listen to what nonsense Mabel would say.

Mabel's shoulders shook with the force of her cries and she said through tears, "Cece, you can't be so selfish. The life you enjoy now should have been your sister's. It's time to give it back to her!"

Celia gritted her teeth and sneered, "Mabel, how dare you say that? You threatened me with my mother's ring and forced me to marry Tyson, remember? Now that I'm living a happy and content life, you want to cause trouble because you're jealous? Who is selfish? Is there anyone more selfish than you?"

Mabel averted her eyes, which were filled with guilt. She muttered under her breath, "If I had known Tyson's grandfather is so willing to spend money for him, I wouldn't have let you marry him. If I had known it earlier, I would have let Cerissa marry Tyson so that she could have been the one who lives a happy life now. We also could have benefited from that arrangement as the CEO of the Kane Group might not have been changed to another person."

Adrian pulled Mabel close to him and addressed Celia with a smile. "Cece, what are you talking about? How could you say that we cause trouble for you? We're not here to cause trouble. We're here to discuss family affairs with you and Tyson."

His tone was void of any arrogance because after all, his situation was different from the past. He dared not offend Celia and Tyson.

Alita was a short-tempered woman. How could she hold back her anger after hearing the words that were coming from Mabel's and Adrien's mouths?

Her hands were firmly placed on her hips as she roared in anger, "Adrien, what nonsense are you talking about? Discuss family affairs? What do you want to discuss with Cece and Tyson? You're here for money, aren't you? You are so shameless."

Adrien was stunned to silence because of Alita's words.

It was not in his nature to be the first one to speak up and as a result of that, he seldom quarreled with others. Alita's words stung and left him feeling embarrassed so he did not utter a response.

Mabel, however, had always been a shrew. She could not stand by and allow herself to be scolded like that. She jutted her chin out and narrowed her eyes. Her fists were clenched at her sides as she stood in front of Alita, looked at her up and down, and snorted, "I've seen you before. You're a friend of Celia's, right? Sure enough, you're friends because you are the same kind of person. You are just like Celia, a sharp-tongued bitch."

Alita immediately flushed upon hearing the harsh words that were flung at her. She started to visibly shake in anger because she had never been insulted like that.

Celia felt the urge to defend Alita, but Alita shook her head and stood in front of her.

"Cece, stand behind me. I'll deal with it. I'm under a lot of pressure at work recently. I'm scolded by fans every day and I can't do the same thing to them so I have a lot of pent-up depression inside of me. I can take out my anger on them."

Celia's breathing quickened as she grasped Alita, worry creasing her brow. "Alita, be careful," she warned.

She wasn't afraid that Alita would lose. After all, it was impossible for her to let herself lose anything.

However, Mabel was not a person who could be easily dealt with. If she took advantage of the situation in her favor, Celia and Alita would still suffer.

Alita turned to look at Celia and comforted her, "It's okay, Cece. Don't be afraid."

As soon as she finished speaking, she grabbed Mabel's collar and slapped her in the face. Her action was so fast that no one present had the time to react.
