

Chapter 506 Proposing A Toast To Dreams

Hearing what Alita and Celia were talking about, Tyson couldn't help but smile.

Celia didn't know that the CEO of the Semshy Group was sitting right beside her now.

Although he hadn't heard Alita sing before and didn't know how good she was, he echoed the sentiment. "It is possible that Celia's idea will be realized. Everything is possible."

Alita couldn't contain her excitement and gave Celia an enthusiastic hug and kissed her on the cheek. "I can't wait for you to help me!"

Blushing, Celia said, "We should both work hard so we can achieve our dreams together."

Tyson rarely saw Celia this excited. He decided to take the initiative to propose a toast to the two women.

"I propose a toast to our dreams!"

Celia and Alita glanced at each other and stood up. Their three glasses clinked together.

"I hope that one day, all of our dreams will come true," said Alita with a wide smile.

Tyson took a sip from his glass.

He would do anything within his power to help Celia and Alita realize their dreams.

They continued drinking the wine and eating the delicious food. Their eyes sparkled at the thought of what the future held for them.

Meanwhile, Wayne and Brea arrived at a French restaurant.

They had chosen the best private room available and ordered all the restaurant's speciality steaks.

As soon as she sat down, Brea removed her mask and cupped her face with her hands. "It's too annoying to wear the mask. It makes me feel so uncomfortable. It's so nice to finally breathe some fresh air."

Wayne gently wiped the sweat from her face, and said, "What do you want to have for dinner next time? I can ask the chef to come to your house and cook it for you there. Or I can hire chefs from anywhere in the world, so you can eat whatever you want at any time."

She was tempted by his thoughtful offer, but she didn't want to entertain it. Instead, she just continued with her complaining. "If I had known that we would run into Cece, I wouldn't have come out with you today. That was so embarrassing. I told her previously that we were just pretending to be a couple, so now she probably thinks I was lying to her."

Wayne poured her a glass of water before addressing her complaints. "Please, just drink some water. Celia is an intelligent woman. She must have guessed by now that we're together. She probably just assumed you were too shy to admit it."

Brea rolled her eyes at him. "That's absolute nonsense. We're not together, okay? I haven't officially agreed yet! Don't push your luck."

Smiling, he grabbed her hand and kissed it gently.

"You have agreed to date me, and we've done things. Why don't you think we're together?"

Brea frowned, confused.

She had a guess of what he was talking about, but couldn't help but ask, "We've done things? I don't know what you me -"

Before she could finish her sentence, Wayne leaned in and kissed her.

He pushed his tongue into her mouth before she had a chance to prepare herself.

Her mind instantly went blank, and she didn't even think to resist him.

After a while, once her whole body had softened to his touch, he finally released her.

"Do you know what I mean now?" Wayne looked at her with raised eyebrows. "As for the other things we've done, I can't so easily show you here. How about we go to the hotel, and I show you there?"

Immediately understanding what he meant, she blushed.
