

Chapter 547 Bumping Into Nolan Changing Clothes

Tyson had just returned to his office and was about to get changed, when he received an unexpected call from Briar.

"Sir, I have some information. Mack Shaw has just opened a high-end club. What is odd is that all the procedures were not handled by his most trusted assistant. Instead, they were handed over to a new hire. At first, I thought that perhaps this new employee was his mistress. But I followed her for a long time and I discovered many interesting things. Everything Mack has done has been in secret. Hardly anyone knows about it."

Tyson fell into deep thought at this revelation.

This news was odd. The Shaw family already owned many high-end clubs and almost all the high-ranking officials and rich men in the city had been bought over by the Shaws. What would be the need for them to open another club?

Stranger still, Mack hadn't entrusted his subordinates to deal with it but ordered strangers to do so...

Something did not add up.

He said to Briar, "Continue to keep an eye on Mack."

"Got it, boss! I will report to you immediately if there are any updates."

"Okay," Tyson said. He put down the phone and was about to continue changing his clothes when he heard a knock at the door.

What was going on? He was about to answer when he heard a familiar voice say, "Mr. Reyes, are you here?"

Tyson's heart raced at the sound of Celia's voice.

This couldn't be good! He panicked. He had never expected Celia or anyone to come up to the office at this time so he hadn't locked the door. The office was brightly lit too. If he pretended he wasn't there, Celia might just open the door and come in.

Celia did just that when she heard no response. She opened the door carefully.

Celia was shocked when she opened the door to find a man standing with his back to her.

The man was tall and had a great figure. From the back he looked familiar. She couldn't help but think of Tyson.

Celia blurted out without thinking, "Tyson?"

The man's body visibly stiffened but he didn't turn his head or speak to her.

Celia's heart was pounding. A terrible idea suddenly popped into her mind.

This was Nolan's office. The person in front of her should be him, right? But why was his figure exactly the same as Tyson's? And why had he seemed to respond when she'd called him Tyson.

Was Nolan, Tyson?

Celia was disturbed but she plucked up the courage to approach the man.

She was very close to him when the phone in her pocket

Celia looked at her phone. It was Wayne.

She knew in her heart that something serious must have happened because Wayne would not call her at this time usually. She answered. "Wayne, what's up?"

Wayne's anxious voice could be heard at the other end of the line. "Cece, hurry up to the Moonlight Bar. It's Tyson. He's very drunk and is going crazy. I can't control him!"

Celia was even more confused now.

If Tyson was with Wayne, then how could the man in front of her be Tyson?

"Cece? Cece? Did you hear me?"

Celia finally reacted to Wayne. She said quickly, "I heard you, I... I'll be right over. Don't worry."

She hung up the phone and slapped her forehead.

Was she losing her mind? How had she been convinced just moments before that Tyson and Nolan were the same person?

Worried that Nolan was angry at her, Celia apologized hurriedly and explained, "I'm sorry, Mr. Reyes. I just wanted to talk to you about work."

Without his voice changer, Tyson could only do his best to lower his voice so that Celia wouldn't recognize him.

He said coldly, "Get out."

These two words were enough to scare Celia.

"I'll be right out!"

Celia felt ashamed and didn't dare to look up. She turned around and left quickly.

Before leaving, Celia closed the door obediently. She felt like a naughty child.
