

Chapter 671 Cold War

She was not pregnant.

Celia breathed a sigh of relief.

She was glad she didn't have to worry about persuading Tyson to accept the baby.

However, she also felt a little disappointed.

She really wanted to have a child with Tyson.

While she was sulking in the bathroom, a knock sounded on the door, and Tyson called out, "Honey, what's wrong? Are you feeling uncomfortable?"

"I'm fine. I'll be out soon," Celia replied casually. She immediately hid the pregnancy test kit and flushed the toilet, hiding the fact that she didn't really use it.

Soon, she opened the door and was surprised to see Tyson standing outside, glancing at her in concern.

"What's wrong? I just took my time in the bathroom. You didn't have to worry," Celia said a little irritably.

Tyson forced a smile and comforted her, "I was just afraid that you were not feeling well. You look really unwell today."

"I'm fine. Don't worry," Celia said as she smiled.

After the two of them washed up, they went straight to bed. Tyson could feel that Celia was in a bad mood. Recalling the words she told him for no reason today, he felt something was wrong. He turned around and wrapped his arms around her slender waist, asking hesitantly, "Honey, are you pregnant? If you are, I will raise it together with you."

Tyson's words cheered Celia up.

Didn't Tyson dislike children?

She suppressed the excitement in her heart and replied calmly, "No."

She was about to discuss the matter of having a baby with Tyson, but she could feel that Tyson was obviously relieved.

Her heart sank, and her mood dropped lower than before.

Maybe he really didn't want to have a baby. He was insincere about raising a child with her. He only said that he would raise it because he had no choice.

Celia didn't feel like continuing the conversation with Tyson. They both went silent, and a gap between them was forming insidiously.

For the next few days, Celia was mainly responsible for following up on Orchi's project as Orchi's new products would be launched next season, and their products would be paired with the dresses designed by Celia for Nora.

Noticing that Celia looked unhappy, Etta approached her and asked in concern, "Cece, are you quarreling with your husband?"

Celia stopped her work momentarily and asked in confusion, "Why did you ask?"

Etta knew that her guess was spot on. She sighed and explained, "The director said the project was very successful. She felt sorry for making you work so hard these days and gave you a few days off to rest. But not only are you working at the company every day, but you are also working harder than usual. You're even working overtime until eight or nine o'clock every night. It's obvious you don't want to go home."

Etta reached out and caressed Celia's face as she continued, "The tell-tale sign is that the smile on your face has disappeared. If you didn't quarrel with your husband, I can't think of other reasons."

Celia couldn't help but sigh as she thought about her relationship with Tyson these days.

She seemed to be really bothered that Tyson didn't want to have a child with her.

She couldn't understand why Tyson didn't want a child. Children are so cute and innocent. What was there not to love?

She could understand if he didn't want a child in the past as they were still struggling for a better life, and he might be afraid to have the baby suffer with them. However, their lives had improved significantly, and they had the ability to raise a child now. So why was he still so against it?

Meanwhile, in the Shaw Group.

Tyson had successfully joined as a member of the Shaw Group and taken over several projects. He had been working in the company for many days without leaving.

When Wayne found out, he went to the Shaw Group to discuss some new projects with Tyson.

He had long wanted a collaboration with the Shaw Group, but he didn't want Mack to gain any benefits, so he had put several big projects on hold.

When Tyson took over Mack's post, Wayne was excited to visit the Shaw Group to collaborate with his friend.

However, Wayne was out of luck. Tyson's current relationship with Celia placed him in a bad mood, and Wayne had to look at Tyson's gloomy face the entire time he visited.

Finally, Wayne snapped and asked, "Buddy, did I offend you? Why do you look so sulky these days? Or are you just in a bad mood for no reason?"

Tyson glared at him and wanted to kick him out. However, a sudden thought came to him, and he asked, "Why do women always want children?"

Chapter 672 Women Like To Be Gently But Persistently...

For some days now, Celia had been cold and impassive towards Tyson. After racking his brain for some time, he realized that her behavior had something to do with what he said about the baby. He may have hurt her feelings unintentionally.

Wayne should have a thing or two to tell him. So he decided to talk to him about it.

Contrary to what he thought, Wayne was just as puzzled as he was.

But both of them tried to come up with a good way to handle the situation.

After being quiet for a long time, Wayne asked all of a sudden, "Why don't you want your own baby?"

Tyson took his time before replying, "It's not that I don't want a child. The thing is, there is danger around me. I have to eliminate every potential threat first, otherwise it would be too much of a risk to have a baby."

"That's your opinion. But Cece sees things differently."

Wayne looked at him and sighed. "Normally, a woman would only be willing to have a baby with a man she is truly in love with. It's a good thing that Cece wants a child. You should be happy. If Brea decides to have one with me, I will wake up every single day smiling ear to ear."

"Your situation is quite different from mine," Tyson

It occurred to Wayne that Tyson and his wife might be having a misunderstanding. He stood up and patted him on the back. "It's high time you revealed your true identity to her. I think women like to be gently but persistently persuaded. There is a charity auction tonight, and she could use a gift right now. You should let her know how much you love her whether or not the two of you are having a child together."

His advice was good. At least Tyson thought so. He nodded in agreement.

Meanwhile, after Celia finished her work for the day, she went downstairs. Her friend was there waiting for her. "Brea, why are you here?" she asked in confusion.

"Don't you remember what's happening tonight?" Brea looked at her with a smile on her face. "I asked you to accompany me to a charity party some time ago, right? Well, it's today. Have you made a decision to go with me or not?"

If Celia went back home, all she would do was stare blankly at her husband. The party could just be what she needed. It might help change her mood.

So, she chose to go with Brea. They got in the car without delay and zoomed off.

While the women were on their way, a vehicle followed theirs secretly.

Soon, they arrived at the party. Both of them alighted the car and walked into the hall. It wasn't long before they found out that Nora was also in attendance.

"There will be a small auction before the party. Let's go and have a look." Nora invited them as soon as they met. "I've seen some of the collections. They are quite impressive."

When they heard what she said, Celia and Brea happily went with her.

The moment they entered the private room where the auction was held, talking and laughing, Tyson saw them.

But he attended the party as Nolan, so he didn't want to let Celia see him.

"How on earth are the both of you here right now?" Wayne hit Tyson on the shoulder and teased him. "If I were you, I would make the best of this coincidence. Pay attention to the treasure Cece likes. Buy it and send it to her as a token of your apology. That should please her a great deal."

Although Tyson looked at Wayne without saying a word, he knew that his suggestion was brilliant.

Within the next quarter-hour, the auction began.

At first, the pieces of jewelry on display were rather common, and failed to attract Celia. But everything changed when a necklace was brought on stage. She couldn't take her eyes off it.

The pink pearl in the middle of its pendant was very bright and beautiful in the light. Also, the inlay technique was exceptionally delicate.

It was almost as if Celia had been mesmerized by the flawlessly crafted necklace.

"You like it, don't you?" Brea asked, noticing the look on her friend's face. "It's not very expensive. Let me get it for you."

Immediately, she started bidding for it.

She didn't even care to know if Celia wanted to buy the "Brea, you don't have to give me anything. I just think the pearl is beautiful, that's all. You shouldn't waste your money on it. I don't like it that much."

"Buying something for you is not a waste of money," Brea replied smilingly. "Don't worry. It's not a big deal for me."

On the second floor of the private room, Tyson had been observing the women. When he was sure that Celia liked the necklace, he gave a hint to Briar to bid.
