

Chapter 723 A Strange Name

In the hospital ward.

Briar was relaying to Tyson what Mack had said in the bar.

The more Tyson listened, the more his brow furrowed. He asked icily, "Are you certain he uttered these words?"

Briar responded respectfully, "I am."

Tyson clenched his fists, wishing he could kill Mack in that moment.

He was certain that Mack was behind Hobson's fall, and once he had the proof, he would make Mack pay the ultimate price.

He said to Briar, "Find a person to fix the surveillance camera right away!"

He wanted to get rid of Mack and all the troubles before Hobson woke up, if possible.

Briar nodded and said, "By the way, Samuel's wife has found the insurance policy. Here it is."

He passed the insurance policy to Tyson.

Tyson opened the policy, only to find that the beneficiary's name was strange.

Although the surname was Shaw, as far as he knew, there was no one in the Shaw family bearing the same first name.

Tyson furrowed his brow, perplexed, and asked Briar,

"Could you look into this person?"

Briar nodded and left, passing by Celia who was holding a lunch box.

Noticing Tyson's furrowed brows, Celia thought he was still worried about Hobson, so she soothed him, "Don't fret over Hobson. God will take care of him. He will be alright."

Tyson nodded gently and held her hand, bringing him a sense of relief.

The two stayed in the hospital the whole night. Although Hobson was out of danger, he was still in a coma.

Upon seeing the fatigue on the faces of the two, the butler said, "You two should go back and get some rest. I'll stay here and let you know if anything arises."

The butler had grown up alongside Hobson and had worked for him for decades, so Tyson trusted him deeply.

He and Celia then returned home to take a bath.

Tyson had just changed out of his clothes when he got a call from Briar.

"Sir, Mack has arrived at the company and convened a general shareholders meeting to terminate you."

Tyson had not anticipated Mack's swift action in his pursuit of the company. Apparently, Hobson was of no concern to Mack. Tyson then informed Celia of the situation before heading off to the Shaw Group.

He broke into the Shaw Group's meeting room.

Sitting at the head of the table, Mack had got most of the shareholders on his side. "Now that Grandpa's in the hospital, I'm in charge of the company for the time being.

All the shareholders can vote to decide whether to give Tyson the boot or not."

All the shareholders who had initially promised to support Tyson in the morning ended up siding with Mack and voted to dismiss Tyson.

Mack glanced over at Tyson, who was standing at the door, and sneered smugly, "You hear that, Tyson? We are all in agreement that you must go. It is now your turn to depart or else I will summon the security guards."

But Tyson didn't budge. He calmly declared, "You don't have the authority to fire me."

"We don't have the authority? What a huge joke!" Mack snorted derisively, "Don't get too big for your britches. Don't be greedy for something that doesn't belong to you."

"You should find out whom it belongs to first."

Tyson kept his composure and produced the share transfer agreement for all to see.

---

Hobson's signature was indeed on the share transfer agreement.

It meant Tyson had already become the biggest shareholder of the Shaw Group, with no one having the right to dismiss him.

Mack was so taken aback that he flew into a rage. He slammed his fist on the table and rose to his feet, exclaiming, "It's impossible! This must be a forgery. Grandpa is in the hospital right now; how could he sign it for you?"

He rushed over, intent on tearing the document up.

Tyson saw through his intention, swiftly raising his hand to block the attack and then delivering a swift kick to his knee.

Mack lay on the floor, clumsily kicked, and fumed at Tyson. "You scoundrel! You faked the signature! Dang it! You have no right to be a part of the Shaw Group!"

Mack had already bribed other shareholders, and they stood by him in berating Tyson.

"I knew it is impossible for Mr. Hobson Shaw to transfer the company to his illegitimate grandson."

"Tyson, if it weren't for Mr. Hobson Shaw, you and your mother would have been left to die out in the cold. If you still have a shred of decency, you shouldn't be so ungrateful!"

"Do you know how many years of imprisonment you will be sentenced to for forging the signature? I strongly recommend that you refrain from fooling around!"

Faced with the doubts of the crowd, Tyson stayed collected and uttered frostily, "This signature is genuine. Grandpa had already signed the transfer agreement prior to the mishap. If you don't trust it, you can have it verified by a handwriting specialist, but I'm certain the findings won't be to your liking!"

Still disbelieving, Mack rose from the floor and shouted to the security guards. He pointed at Tyson and yelled, "Get him out of here fast!"

The security guards exchanged glances, yet ultimately disregarded Mack's order. They instead gathered around Tyson in unison and bowed in respect.

Without hesitation, they dragged Mack out as soon as Tyson gave the order, rendering Mack's struggle futile.

Mack bellowed furiously, "It's evident I'm the rightful heir of the Shaw Group. You must oust that bastard!"

No one paying him any heed, he was quickly dragged out.

After handling the most irritating one, Tyson took his seat at the head of the table, surveyed the other shareholders and declared coolly, "Anyone who is skeptical or unconvinced can leave on their own."

Most of the shareholders were torn, realizing Mack was no longer in a favorable position, so they refrained from further comment and opted to flatter Tyson instead.

Tyson wore a satisfied smile as he said, "Since you've chosen to side with me, you ought to conduct yourself properly. Otherwise, I'm uncertain as to what action I'll take."

Everyone was shocked. "Mr. Shaw, we'll heed whatever you say from now on. We'll obey your orders without question!"

Tyson achieved success in acquiring the Shaw Group by taking this approach.

Mack's hatred for Hobson grew to extreme levels after he was thrown out of the company.

He had thought Hobson would provide him a way out due to their family connection, but he hadn't anticipated that Hobson had already transferred his shares to Tyson as a precaution.

He loathed him so intensely!

He hated Hobson more than Tyson and Celia right now.

He couldn't fathom why Hobson showed Tyson such partiality.

But now he didn't want to fathom it anymore, as he was determined to get his revenge on Hobson, Tyson, and everyone else!

Mack hailed a taxi and rushed to the hospital in a hurry.

Coincidentally, the butler went to the bathroom, and Hobson was the only one left in the ward.

No one tried to stop Mack, for no one could have imagined that Hobson's grandson had the ferocity to kill his own grandfather.

Mack's hatred burned his conscience to a crisp as he gazed upon Hobson, lying on the bed with a ventilator strapped to his face.

The only thought on his mind was to remove Hobson's

Let him die!

Reaching out his hand to the ventilator, he was startled by a sudden bang!

The door to the ward abruptly swung open.
