

Chapter 76 Her Senior From College

Although Kiley was talking faintly, Brea could hear her clearly.

In a fit of rage, Brea shouted, "I dare you to repeat what you just said."

She was defending Celia, but it was not something Celia wanted her to do.

"Brea."

Celia stopped her with a grateful smile. "Thank you. But I can handle these things myself. They will get to know me eventually. It's not good to have a fight with colleagues on the first day of work."

Brea took a deep breath and whispered into Celia's ear, "Fine, if you insist. I'll let her go this time. It's just that sometimes my temper gets the better of me. You are a lot more patient than I am."

Kiley sneered arrogantly, "There is a rotten apple in every barrel. I was naive to think there would be no nepotism and corruption at Semshy Group."

Brea was really triggered now.

She rushed to Kiley and said condescendingly, "Speak clearly. Who are you calling a rotten apple?"

Kiley did not dare to offend Brea, so she quickly smiled and said, "Miss Duffy, don't get me wrong. It's not personal. I just don't like nepotism."

Celia stepped forward and said coldly, "I know that you look down on me now, but I will prove myself."

Kiley burst into laughter as though she had heard some joke and retorted, "And how do you plan on doing that? With your background?"

Just when Celia was about to speak again, she heard a man's voice. "What are you arguing about?"

The voice sounded familiar.

Celia turned around and was surprised to find Derek Watson, her senior from college.

Derek had been one of the most popular students at the university. He was good-looking and excelled in academics. He used to give lectures to other students. He had been every girl's dream guy.

Her relationship with Derek had been pretty good until he went abroad.

When Kiley saw Derek there, she immediately shut up. "Hello, manager," everyone greeted Derek in unison.

That was the moment Celia realized that Derek was the manager of the design department.

'He is my superior now?' She was taken by surprise.

It did not take long for Derek to find Celia in the crowd and greet her with a smile.

Celia smiled back, having no intention of making conversation with him in public.

She did not want to invite any undue attention since people were already gossiping about how she got the job. In fact, she believed it would be best for her, if she stayed away from him.

Kiley grew jealous when she saw Derek smiling at Celia. She raised her voice on purpose and said, "Mr. Watson, this is Celia. Miss Duffy brought her here. I heard that she got the job without even having to go through an interview and I'd like to hear your opinion on that."

Derek responded to her words with sheer indifference.

He then turned to Brea, smiled, and said, "Miss Duffy, I won't interfere with your business. If you think Celia is fit for the job, then I respect your decision."

Brea rolled her eyes in discontent and said, "You don't have the right to interfere in such matters anyway. Keep your subordinates in control. I'm not as soft as Celia."
