

Chapter 763 Disagreement

Although Hendrix was practically interrogating him, Moses remained composed. He voiced his complaints. "Hendrix, aren't you being too unfair in your questioning? I genuinely had no idea that Tyson was your son. Even if I did, what difference would it make? Why do you care so much about an illegitimate child like Tyson, when you have another son?"

As he spoke, he became aware of the intense stare from Hendrix.

Overcome with fear, he abruptly fell silent.

Hendrix was aware of his younger brother's thoughts and warned him, "Let me make it clear that Tyson is not an illegitimate child. If you plan to utilize the Shaw Group to undermine the Semshy Group, I am prepared to take back the company and handle the situation myself."

He and Tyson's mother had secretly taken marriage vows at a church in the past. In the presence of the vicar, he had placed a wedding ring on Tyson's mother's finger. They, however, failed to get their marriage recorded officially as they were separated by Gretchen. As a result, Tyson was not illegitimate in his eyes, but rather his lawful son!

Upon hearing Hendrix's words, Moses became flustered and uncertain.

It had taken a great deal of effort for Moses to attain the authority to manage the company, so how could he just relinquish it?

However, the situation had now changed. Hendrix had deep roots in the Shaw Group, and he had numerous loyal employees that Moses would take a long time to replace. This was despite having started the process since taking over. As a result, Moses still felt quite apprehensive about Hendrix's hold over the Shaw Group.

Faced with the reality of the situation, Moses opted to concede to his brother's authority. "Hendrix, I made a mistake as I was not aware that Tyson is your son. I promise you that I will not oppose the Semshy Group in the future."

Observing Hendrix's concern for Tyson and his desire to improve the relationship between the two of them, Gretchen spoke up. "Hendrix, I have dispatched someone to investigate the child's background. I've heard that Tyson bears a striking resemblance to you when you were younger. As you care for him so deeply, you should reconnect with him. After all, he is also a member of the Shaw family. You cannot let him remain estranged forever."

As soon as Gretchen finished speaking, a woman's voice rang out. "I disagree!"

All eyes turned towards the woman who spoke, and it was revealed to be Isla. She made her way down from the second floor at a slow pace.

"I disagree too!"

Walking behind Isla was her son, Alex. The two had eavesdropped on the conversation for some time. They emerged only when Gretchen mentioned the idea of reconnecting with Tyson.

Isla strode towards Hendrix. "Hendrix Shaw, you need to abandon the immature idea of being reconnected with your illegitimate son. I have tolerated so much of what you did in the past, and now you want to bring that illegitimate child back home? Alex and I are still alive!"

Although Isla's tone was filled with anger, Hendrix remained calm and unafraid. He looked straight at her. "I want to make it clear once again that Tyson is not illegitimate. You are not entitled to use such a derogatory term to describe him!"

Isla's face flashed with guilt. She swiftly pushed Alex in front of Hendrix. "I'm not sure what you're thinking. But I know Alex is your son as well. You only care about the child you had with that woman. Have you ever thought about your rightful son?" Isla expressed her frustration. "You have been cold to me all these years, and it's clear that you don't like me. I have endured all of this. But Alex is also your son. How can you treat him so indifferently?"

Alex echoed his mother's sentiment. "Father, are you really planning to reconnect with your illegitimate son? You once told me that you would only have one son and wouldn't have a second one. So, even if you bring Tyson back, I won't fully accept him!"

When Hendrix gazed at Alex, he felt guilty. But his stance remained resolute. "I admit I said those words, but I was unaware of Tyson's existence then. Knowing that he is my son, it is imperative that I rebuild our relationship. Whoever opposes my son goes against me, even if that individual happens to be my other son."

After conveying his message, Hendrix pivoted and departed the scene.

Despite her reluctance, Isla felt powerless to act. She hurried to Gretchen with a despondent expression. "Gretchen, you have to assist me. Are you truly going to allow Hendrix to bring that illegitimate child back?"

Gretchen was indifferent to Isla's distress. Her thoughts were consumed by the realization that Hendrix, her own son, had paid her no heed. A wave of sadness washed over her.

It appeared Hendrix harbored resentment towards Gretchen for events that occurred in the past. Reconciliation between them was likely to be a difficult and complicated process.

Despite the anguish in her heart, Gretchen responded to Isla's pleas. "The Shaw family has a debt to that child. It is only fair that Hendrix is able to reconnect with Tyson as his son. However, rest assured that he will not jeopardize Alex's position. No other person can take away what belongs to him."

Gretchen gave Isla a reassuring pat on the shoulder and then made her way upstairs with the assistance of the butler.

Isla couldn't help feeling resentful towards Gretchen's favoritism, but what she resented even more was Hendrix's inability to let go of his past relationship. Despite having a son with him, it seemed that Hendrix only cared about his relationship with the other woman and their son.

Isla was unwilling to let go of her resentment easily. After all, the future was uncertain. No one could guarantee that the reemergence of Hendrix's other son wouldn't affect Alex eventually, despite Gretchen's assurances.

Isla was determined to safeguard her son's future and preserve her standing within the family. She made up her mind she would never allow Tyson to be accepted into the family.

Alex had recently discovered the existence of Tyson. Initially, he was not particularly bothered by it. After all, in wealthy families, it was not uncommon for individuals to have illegitimate siblings. However, when Alex observed how much Hendrix cared about Tyson, he couldn't help but feel apprehensive.

Alex's hands balled into fists as he turned to Isla. "Mother, what are we supposed to do now? It appears that Father has taken a liking to that illegitimate son of his. Even if Tyson is a worthless piece of garbage, with Father's affection for him, he might end up taking what is rightfully mine. I cannot sit back and watch this happen!" Alex's voice rose in frustration.

Isla shared the same sentiments as her son.

Feeling helpless about the situation Tyson created for them, Isla could only reassure her son, "Don't worry. I won't allow anyone to take away what is rightfully yours."

After she comforted her son for a while, Isla retired to her bedroom to rest.

The bedroom door creaked open soon afterwards. Moses entered.

Seeing Moses enter the room, Isla was not surprised and quickly stood up from the sofa.

Moses approached Isla and embraced her in his arms. "Are you okay? Let me make you feel better."

Isla pushed Moses away and glared at him. "You looked so scared when you saw your brother earlier. You must help me find a way to get rid of Tyson Shaw. He will become a threat to our son's position in the future."

Moses furrowed his brows. "Getting rid of Tyson now wouldn't be easy. It would have been easier if my brother hadn't found out about his identity."

"I don't want to listen to your meaningless chatter, Moses." Isla cut him off abruptly and spoke frigidly. "Alex is your son. You know very well how much we have suffered in these years. Do you really want to see your son's company being taken away by an illegitimate child?"

Naturally, Moses had no desire to witness such an outcome. He firmly believed that the Shaw Group should rightfully be passed down to Alex.

Moses embraced Isla once again and comforted her, "Rest assured, I will find a way to eliminate Tyson. Alex is our son, and the Shaw family assets and the company will belong to him."

Isla glared at him again and there was a suggestive glint in her eyes this time.

Moses kissed her and put his hand under her shirt. He couldn't wait to fondle her soft breasts.

Isla was considered one of the most beautiful women in the upper-class circle when she was young. After marrying Hendrix, she managed to maintain her charm as a mature woman. Moses, who had always been sexually attracted to her, couldn't resist the temptation to touch her.

They began to kiss hotly and got on the bed. When Moses penetrated her, Isla urged him to hurry. "Quickly! I'm afraid someone will find you here!"
