Hendrix suffered a huge blow. He looked much older than before. He realized he couldn't accomplish what he wanted, so he could only drag himself away.

But he wasn't about to give up that easily. The last time he gave up, he lost Tyson's mother. He would never make the same mistake again.

Watching Hendrix's receding figure, Tyson became irritated and loosened his tie.

He couldn't believe Hendrix expected his forgiveness after assisting him in resolving a crisis just once.

This wasn't the end of his battle with the Shaw family. Tyson was determined to make the Shaw family pay for what they did for as long as he lived.

Tyson gradually composed himself. The office door was knocked again at this point. Briar was the one who entered.

He stated, "Sir, we discovered that Moses Shaw, from the Shaw Group, was the one who targeted Semshy Group. He has always hated Hendrix Shaw, and the driver who caused your mother's accident was also hired by him!"

So it was Moses Shaw!

Tyson frowned.

Briar went on, saying, "Previously, we thought that Mack had bribed the driver. Furthermore, the driver committed suicide out of dread of being punished. We knew it was related to the Shaw family of Captern later, but we weren't sure who exactly was behind it. I was surprised to discover that the driver who caused the collision was hired by Moses Shaw. What are your plans, sir?"

Tyson was silent for a while. He wasn't sure what he was going to do next.

Seeing that Tyson didn't respond, Briar went on, "And, one more thing. I learned that Moses has a son in Captern. Perhaps we should start with that. We might be able to figure out why Moses did this."

Tyson agreed with Briar's plan and stated, "Go ahead. You know what you should do. It's best to collect evidence of Moses Shaw's cooperation with the driver. If you can't, make sure he doesn't know we're looking into him."

He had to continue with his plans regardless of the outcome because it was the only way he could avenge his mother's death.

Briar nodded and walked away.

Immediately he got to the door, he met Celia, who had come to see Tyson.

He bowed to Celia and inquired, "Ma'am, are you here to see Mr. Shaw?"

Celia nodded. "I heard that someone from the Shaw Group visited. Is Tyson alright?"

Briar replied, "Mr. Shaw is not in a good mood. But I'm confident your presence will make him happy."

Celia's cheeks flushed red. She walked into the office after thanking Briar. She saw Tyson seated, rubbing his brow, irritated.

Tyson had encountered numerous hardships previously, but he had never worn such an expression. He appeared to be very upset this time.

Celia sighed, feeling sorry for her beloved husband.

"Tyson, are you in trouble?" she inquired, walking over to him.

Tyson felt a little better after hearing her voice. He said, shaking his head, "Don't be concerned. I'm perfectly fine."

"For some reason, I find that difficult to believe." Celia approached him, massaged his temples gently, and said, "I heard Hendrix Shaw of the Shaw Group paid a visit. He must have discovered that you are his son. What was the purpose of his visit? What did he tell you?"

Tyson remained silent for a while, indicating he was unsure about how to reply to Celia's inquiries.

Rather than pressure Tyson for an answer, Celia chose to remain quiet and wait patiently.

Tyson eventually spoke. "Hendrix Shaw has reached out to me in an attempt to re-establish a connection."

Celia was somewhat taken aback by the news. Although she'd considered the possibility of the Shaw family wanting to reconnect with Tyson, she hadn't anticipated it would happen so quickly.

Celia cautiously continued to question Tyson, "What are your feelings about this?"

Tyson's hands balled into fists. "He has no right to call himself my father. Why would he even think I'd want to reconnect with him? He is the reason my mother died, and why I've been tormented by pain for years."

Recognizing that Tyson was overcome with emotion, Celia embraced him and offered comfort. "There, there. My love, it's not your fault. Don't blame yourself."

After a moment, Tyson looked up at Celia and regained his composure. He let out a sigh. "To be honest, when I was younger, I used to yearn for my father's affection. However, every time I asked my mom about him, she would burst into tears. As time went on, I stopped asking because I couldn't bear to see her cry. Then I was taken back by the Shaw family. At first, I believed Danilo was my father, but he seemed to harbor a deep dislike for me. No matter how much Mack bullied me, Danilo always took Mack's side and never showed me any love. Following my mother's death, my animosity towards the Shaw family intensified. I resented them for not taking responsibility for me when I was born, and for their apathy towards my mother's passing."

Celia had primarily seen the resilient and strong side of Tyson, and seldom heard him speak of his childhood. She knew his childhood was rough, but she was surprised to learn his experiences were even more difficult than her own.

Despite Adrien's repeated letdowns, there was a time when he loved her deeply.

In contrast, Tyson never experienced any affection from his fathers.

Tyson's past experiences were significantly more distressing than hers.

Celia embraced Tyson, offering him comfort and reassurance. "Remember, Danilo is not your biological father. He treated you poorly, but you don't need to take his behavior to heart. Someone like him doesn't deserve your attention or energy."

At her words, Tyson's eyes suddenly grew distant and forlorn.

In truth, Tyson sensed Hendrix still cared for him, but he couldn't forgive Hendrix for the misunderstanding with his mother. It caused them so much suffering.

The Shaw family was involved in his mother's death, and this only deepened his animosity towards them. Given these circumstances, it was challenging for Tyson to let go of his resentment and be reconciled with the Shaw family.

However, Tyson swiftly masked his internal turmoil and put on a brave face. He lifted Celia's face and gave her a tender kiss on the lips. "I'm so grateful for you, Cece. Right now, my focus is on us, not my father. Once we handle everything, let's plan a getaway vacation. I want to do everything I can to be a great father."

Celia nodded and nestled her head into his arms, taking comfort in his embrace.

Suddenly, Tyson's phone rang, interrupting the peaceful moment they shared. Reluctantly, the couple separated from each other.

Tyson answered the phone. He immediately heard Emmitt's voice on the other end, reporting work-related updates.

Sensing Tyson was engrossed in his conversation with Emmitt, Celia didn't want to disturb him any further. She planted a gentle kiss on his cheek. "I'll head back now."

Celia tiptoed away from Tyson's office and made her way back to her own workspace.

As soon as Celia settled down at her desk, Etta rushed into her office to deliver some exciting news. "Cece, we are about to land a huge order! The client is requesting to meet with you in person."
