

Chapter 804 Forgiveness

Lamont had genuine affection for his adopted daughter, Aubrey, and they shared a father-daughter bond.

Throughout her time living with him and his mother, she had shown great obedience and never acted arrogant, despite being treated like a true member of the Carter family.

Lamont would have allowed Aubrey to remain part of the Carter family as his daughter if she wasn't Faye's child.

However, the thought of her being Faye's biological daughter diminished Lamont's affection for her.

He eventually said, "I'll give you a sum of money and an apartment. You're no longer associated with the Carter family."

Upon learning that Lamont planned to remove her from the Carter family, She held onto his arm and begged, "Father, please don't make me leave. I don't want to be an orphan again. This is where I grew up. I don't know anything about Faye's wrongdoings. Why should I suffer the consequences of her actions? Even if I'm not part of the Carter family anymore, I still want to stay here. This is my home, and I don't want to go anywhere else."

Despite Aubrey's tearful pleas, Lamont remained unmoved. He said coldly, "Tonight will be your last night staying here. I'll arrange for the apartment to be cleaned. You should move out tomorrow morning and never come back."

Aubrey realized that Lamont was resolute in his decision, leaving her feeling weak and defeated.

Her body slumped to the floor, and her face lost its youthful glow, resembling that of an elderly woman.

Celia was deeply moved by Lamont's actions for her mother. She felt grateful and touched by his kindness.

Looking at Aubrey, Celia couldn't help but feel sorry for her. Aubrey had been deceived by her mother and was unaware of her true identity. When she finally learned the truth, she was cast out from the family she had known for over a decade.

Despite this, Celia could understand Lamont's decision. Faye had committed many terrible deeds, and Aubrey was connected to her through blood. Whenever Lamont saw Aubrey, he would be reminded of Faye's wrongdoings.

Perhaps, it was for the best that they parted ways. Celia believed that with time, Aubrey would understand Lamont's reasoning.

No matter what happened before, tomorrow would be the start of a new chapter in Aubrey's life. It could be a good ending.

Finally, the truth came to light.

After Celia left the Carter family's home with Tyson, Alec followed them discreetly. He had many things to say to Celia but didn't know how to start.

He was envious of how easily Lamont and Celia had got along, and he longed to hear Celia call him 'Father.'

As they walked along, Celia suddenly turned around, smiled at Alec and said, "I forgive you."

Alec was elated by her words, rushed over to her and asked, "Really? Are you willing to accept me as your father?"

Despite being almost fifty years old, Alec spoke to Celia with caution and hopefulness.

Celia was touched and amused by Alec's reaction and nodded. "Yes, Dad."

Tears filled Alec's eyes as he heard Celia call him 'Dad.'

He couldn't help but take Celia's hand and said, "My dear daughter, do you know how long I've been waiting for this day?"

Celia was even more moved and replied, "Of course I know. I've been waiting for this day for a long time too."
