

Chapter 85 Adrien's Two Daughters

Tyson had just finished a meeting with several senior executives and was making a detour to walk past the design department.

He just missed Celia so much and wanted to know what she was doing.

He had initially planned to see her so he could soothe his loneliness, but he didn't expect that she would still be busy with her work during the lunch break. He felt a little sorry for her.

But at the same time, he also appreciated her passion for her work.

Even without him, Celia wasn't destined to be stuck in a small company. She deserved a bigger stage and a better future.

With that in mind, Tyson quickly turned around and went back to the CEO's office. As soon as he sat down, Brea walked into the room.

"Mr. Reyes, you're finally finished with the meeting. I've been waiting for you for a long time."

"What's the matter?" Tyson asked indifferently.

"Didn't you tell me to keep an eye on Cece and report her situation to you at any time? You also told me that I'd inform you immediately if someone ever bullied her," Brea murmured.

Tyson snapped into attention. "Is she being bullied?" he asked anxiously.

Brea nodded. "Yes! Earlier, I took her to the design department so that she could familiarize herself with the new environment. There's this employee in the design department called Kiley Lynch. You probably don't know her because it's the first time I've ever heard of her, too..."

She rambled on and on without any indication of stopping.

Tyson's body was filled with tension. "Get to the point," he ordered.

Brea stopped and reluctantly obliged.

"Kiley picked on Cece and told her that she only got the job by pulling some strings. Not to worry though, I helped Cece out and made Kiley apologize to her in the end."

Tyson breathed a sigh of relief. "Good job," he praised. "You didn't let the new employee get bullied."

Although she had been complimented, Brea couldn't help but feel a little suspicious.

Why did this man change so suddenly? Since when did he care about looking after the new employees?

"Of course. After all, Cece is the designer that I personally recruited, so I appreciate her very much. I'll continue to take good care of her in the future."

She smiled as she suddenly thought of something. Touching her chin thoughtfully, she added, "Speaking of which, Derek Watson, the manager of the design department, seems to be taking good care of Cece, too."

Tyson was in the middle of signing a document when he heard this, and his hand that was holding the pen paused in its motion. "Is this Derek Watson a man?"

"Of course. You can already tell by the name that he's a man!"

Tyson's face instantly darkened. "Keep an eye on that man named Watson and that... Kiley Lynch. If she dares pick on Celia again, fire her instantly."

Brea stared at him, stunned.

She and Mr. Reyes were on good terms with each other, but he had never taken care of her like this!

Curiosity getting the better of her, she asked, "Mr. Reyes, what's your relationship with Cece?"

"Don't ask questions that you shouldn't ask."

Brea figured that he would say that. She shrugged and didn't press on it further. "Okay. I know that I am only responsible for keeping an eye on Cece."

But even though she said so, she was thinking of something else in her heart.

Celia must have some sort of secret relationship with him. Why else would he want to keep an eye on her?

After all, Mr. Reyes was the most mysterious man in this circle! Even if the world ended, he would still be the same cold, indifferent man he always was. And this same man was paying so much attention to one person.

"If you don't have anything else to say," Tyson said flatly as he buried himself in his work, "you can now go back to the performing arts department."

Brea pouted and obliged, leaving the room without looking back while humming a song under her breath.

As soon as she left, Briar pushed the door open and came inside.

He placed a file on the desk in front of Tyson.

"Mr. CEO, I've finished investigating the background of the Kane family. It turns out that Adrien has two daughters!"
