

Chapter 89 The Pricy Ring

With this revelation, Celia felt so shocked as if she had been struck by lightning.

She couldn't believe that the wedding ring, given by the Shaw family which was the richest and most powerful family in Hosworth, was a fake!

The Shaw family's wealth was well-known by others, not to mention the fact that they had also been a jewelry family for generations.

'The Shaw family doesn't care about Tyson at all. That must be why they couldn't even bother to spend a cent on him as they just used a fake ring for his wedding,' Celia analyzed in her mind.

She sighed heavily. She couldn't help but feel extremely sorry for Tyson, who was always mistreated by his own family.

"I see, sorry to bother you."

Celia smiled awkwardly and took back the ring to leave.

Now, she felt completely helpless as her plan to get money fast was ruined. She really didn't know how to raise money for Flavia's operation.

In a foul mood, when she was about to stand up, the staff member stopped her. "Ma'am, even though this one can't be pawned, the ring on your finger is of good quality. Would you like to pawn it instead?"

Celia was stunned, and she felt that this situation was a bit comical.

The ring on her finger was a wedding gift from Tyson. He had told her that despite its realistic appearance, it was a rhinestone and wasn't worth much.

Celia became even more embarrassed as she explained to the staff member with a smile, "I'm sorry. The ring on my finger is also fake. It isn't worth much."

Looking at her, the staff member smiled subtly, with a hint of indescribable meaning in it. "Ma'am, you have a good sense of humor.

I have worked in the pawnshop for so many years and have seen a lot of precious jewelry pieces. So, I can easily identify whether this one is fake or real. The diamond on your ring is obviously the top Graff pink diamond of excellent quality. How can it not be worth much?"

"But it's really a fake," countered Celia, frustrated.

The staff member shook his head and insisted, "I believe in my own judgment. Would you like to take off the ring and let me examine it?"

Seeing that he seemed to be strongly misunderstanding, Celia didn't know how to explain further. So, she helplessly took off the ring and gave it to the man for inspection.

All of a sudden, she became curious about where Tyson bought this ring. It should be difficult to buy a fake one that looked realistic enough to confuse almost everyone.

Last time, Brea had mistaken this ring for a real one, and now, the staff member of the pawnshop also made the same mistake. Was the imitation technique these days really flawless?

After the staff member checked the ring several times, he respectfully gave it back to Celia. With a big smile on his face, he said excitedly, "This diamond ring is indeed a real one. And according to its weight, it's worth at least fifty million dollars."

Hearing such an enormous price for one little fake ring, Celia was stunned.

She began to doubt herself. 'Did I misunderstand something?'

Could it be that the imitation work was so good that it even deceived the inspection machine? Or was the ring really a real one?

If it was fake, she had to praise the person who made this. Was there really such high-end imitation technology in the world? Anyhow, even if such technology existed, such a brilliant imitation should be worth a lot.

But with Tyson's savings, there was no way he could afford it, could he?

When she was lost in her various speculations and conjectures, the staff member called the manager over to let him take a look at the ring.

"I'm the manager of this pawnshop. My surname is Barnes."

After Mr. Barnes introduced himself, he asked Celia excitedly, "Ma'am, do you have any intention to pawn or sell this ring?"

To be honest, this kind of ring is indeed rare. There are only a few diamonds of this kind, and they can't even be bought in ordinary jewelry shops. It can be considered a unique one. Therefore, if you are willing to pawn or sell this ring, our pawnshop is willing to show our sincerity and give you a higher price than other pawnshops. We never let our customers down."

Celia was speechless. She honestly felt as if her world had been turned upside down.

At this moment, the staff member, the machine and even the manager were saying that this was indeed a valuable ring. It couldn't be that all of them were making a mistake, could it?

Was this ring really a real one?

How could it be possible? How would Tyson have the money to give her such an expensive diamond ring?

The Shaw family treated him worse than Celia thought. It was safe to assume that Tyson could never receive money from them to buy a real diamond ring. After all, even the wedding ring they prepared for him turned out to be fake.

Then again, except for the Shaw family, where could he possibly get such a large sum of money?
