

MADAM'S IDENTITIES SHOCKS THE ENTIRE CITY AGAIN Chapter 390

This year, Qing University was autonomously enrolling ten more students than in previous years, so there was an extremely large number of applicants. Basically, anyone who had a little confidence in their scores had come to participate. Everyone wanted to give it a try. Even if they failed, they would still have experience for their college entrance examination.

Qiao Chen took her admission ticket number at the security checkpoint and went to the examination room.

Her examination room was on the first floor.

-201-08

She looked around and quickly found classroom 201. Taking a deep breath, she stepped into the classroom.

The seats in the examination room were almost filled. Time was precious. They were either checking their pencil case or taking out the workbook to recite formulas and vocabulary.

She was in the eighth seat in the second row.

Qiao Chen glanced at her seat, which was close to the door. In front of her and behind her were boys wearing glasses, all looking very honest. It was just that the seat obliquely in front was vacant, and no one had come yet.

She put her school bag in the temporary storage area in front, took out the pencil case and the exercise book, and quickly sat back in her position, wanting to hurry up and revise for the last time.

It was impossible for independent admissions to have an exam for a few days, even less so at Qing University.

Qing University's independent enrollment had always directly issued a comprehensive set of test papers, which covered all the questions in physics, biochemistry, history, and politics besides language. The total score was 650 points, and the number of questions was not as large as the college entrance examination, but the weight of each question was much higher.

After all, it selected outstanding students from the top rankings, and the application questions of the test paper all referred to the Mathematical Olympiad standards.

The exam lasted for four hours, and students could choose to hand in their own papers after two hours.

Some students who were struggling with the difficulty of the test papers would hand in the papers in advance if they consciously knew they would fail the test. This was also a very reasonable rule.

Otherwise, forcing a student to sit there and write the exam for four hours was no different from torture.

"Mathematical, Mathematical, m/a/t/h..." Qiao Chen sat there with her head buried nervously, repeating the words summed up by the tutor for her. At the same time, she opened the exercise book to see what she still could not remember. She took advantage of the few minutes left to make a quick note of it, in case it came out in the exam.

Suddenly.

Two invigilators entered the classroom with their test papers.

The people in the examination room swiftly put away the things in their hands and started to get up and put them in the temporary storage place of the podium.

Qiao Chen also closed the materials in her hand, got up, and put the things back in her schoolbag. When she sat back again, she raised her eyes and saw a figure coming in with the two invigilators behind her.

Her eyes narrowed to the point of a needle, and she almost couldn't control her scream at that moment.

Qiao Nian?!

The person who came in was the last one to arrive, but she was so casual and not in a rush. Her head was lowered, and she held her mobile phone as if she was replying to a message.

Her snow-white delicate face looked careless and indifferent.

It was as if she had come here to relax, not to take an exam.

She came in and looked around, then realized she was in the exam room already. Looking up, she threw her phone into the black shoulder bag, then took out a pencil case. She held her admission ticket and came to her seat.

Qiao Chen watched her pull the chair diagonally in front of her away and sit down.

She put the pencil case down and tapped her fingers on the table, not once looking in Qiao Chen's direction, as if she had not realized they were in the same exam room.

Qiao Chen took a few deep breaths. She never expected Qiao Nian to be in the same examination room as her!

At this time, the exam bell rang.

