#Zhui Guang enters Weibo #

A few trending topics about her could be seen, and there was a caption at the top.

She leaned back against the chair casually and picked up the mineral water beside her. She unscrewed the cap and took a slow sip. She then placed the bottle beside her and opened the Weibo message the system had sent.

There were many comments below.

The first few comments hadn't been Liked by the new reviewers, and the Likes were generally higher.

[Pink Piglet: Damn, another hot chick pretending to be my goddess is here. Can't Weibo catch her?]

[I Fly Horizontally: Hehehehe, this account is fake! My big boss never opens Weibo. You don't even know this, and you still dare to write yourself as Zhui Guang, It's bullshit!]

[Upright Passer-by: Tsk, I was just listening to some music on QQ, but Weibo actually recommended me this fake account. Impressive (7)]

Qiao Nian's gaze followed the comments. When she saw the comment that told her to 'eat sh*t', her eyebrows raised in interest. Her cold jawline was smooth as she supported her chin with her hand as if she was pondering the possibility of doing so.

Behind these comments with higher Likes were more new comments that surged in after her verification.

[Melbourne has no tears: Ahhhhhhh! I'm dead! It's really my goddess. My goddess has opened her account on Weibo.]

[Too Angry: Damn, what's going on today? What kind of festival is this? Why did Zhui Guang create a Weibo account?]

Then, it was the highest post forwarded.

Qiao Nian narrowed her eyes and saw that it was also a verified Weibo post. However, it was different from her. There was a blue V behind the account.

{Nie Mi Studio: This is the real Zhui Guang (forwarded)}

There were countless forwards to this simple forwarding Weibo.

[Southern Husky: Master Nie forwarded the certificate. It's Zhui Guang. It can't be wrong!]

[Halo: Master Nie forwarded the account... Tsk, this proves that it's the real Zhui Guang.]

{Weeping Kitten: Front row, follow the account decisively!}

Qiao Nian ignored the quiet atmosphere in the ward. The screen of her mobile phone on the table lit up. She picked it up leisurely and looked down at the screen.

It was a message from Nie Mi.

[How is it? Have you logged in?]

Qiao Nian typed back.

After replying, she turned her gaze to the notebook again. She leaned forward and typed on the keyboard before searching for Xue Ziang's Weibo.

There were already many reposts and comments under Xue Ziang's victim statement. It could be seen that Jiang Li's company's public relations were bad.

The other party's popularity had already risen.

Qiao Nian opened the comments below. The comment with the most Likes was still the person exposing the truth. She looked at it again and retracted the light in her eyes. Her long fingers typed on the keyboard as she forwarded Xue Ziang's Weibo message and tagged Jiang Li.

All the Weibo users who followed Zhui Guang realized that there was a new Weibo post on her homepage.

A lot of people looked over curiously.

[Zhui Guang: [Repost] @JiangLi, my brother.]

It was simple and rough.

Behind him was Xue Ziang complaining about Jiang Li hitting him. He was still checking Weibo in the hospital.

Originally, when Jiang Li hit someone, Xinghao Entertainment had spent a lot of money to suppress the news. Xue Ziang's Weibo was still quite popular, but it hadn't reached the trending searches.

In the end, when Qiao Nian reposted it, Xue Ziang's popularity exploded.

After reposting and playing with Weibo, Qiao Nian directly clicked on the forked page and picked up the prescription she had half-written this morning. She then continued to write Master Cheng's prescription.

Master Cheng was considered to be suffering a chronic illness in his old age. He couldn't use the medicine too forcefully, and it was easy for it to be ineffective. Therefore, Qiao Nian was quite troubled about which herbs to use.

Not long after, a few more paper balls appeared on the ground.

She didn't look at it after reposting it calmly.

However, her Weibo trending increased because of a casual forwarding post.

#Zhui Guang and Xue Ziang

#Zhui Guang is Jiang Li's Sister

Two topics were directly pushed to the top three of the trending searches.

Within the city hospital, Chu Yao had just received the news. Her originally high-spirited face was now covered in dark clouds, twisted beyond compare.

She held her phone in her hand.

Xue Ziang's assistant was beside her. A young man was lying on the bed. The man had been beaten black and blue, and his original handsome appearance could not be seen. He was also extremely anxious and wanted to get up from the bed.

"How could this be?"

"Don't move around recklessly." Chu Yao held her phone and had a splitting headache. She couldn't understand why Zhui Guang, who had not appeared for ten thousand years, would stand out and speak up for Jiang Li. She stared at Xue Ziang's Weibo post on her phone.

Originally, it only had slightly more than ten thousand forwards.

At this moment, it directly soared to more than 70,000 forwards, and it was gradually increasing.

This was what they had expected.

Because the more heated this matter became, the easier it was for them to get dividends from it. Now that things were developing in the direction they were looking forward to, no one in the ward laughed.

Zhui Guang personally appeared.

She clearly didn't say anything.

However, she had pulled Xue Ziang from the clouds into the mud. It was a painful slap!

Chu Yao looked at the public opinion below. Most of the passersby who had sympathized with Xue Ziang now stood by Jiang Li's side and mocked Xue Ziang for having a foul mouth, deserving of a beating.

Her temples immediately pounded as she stared intently at the repost. No matter what, she couldn't figure out where Xinghao Entertainment got the ability to not only get Master Nie to appear but also Zhui Guang.

Zhui Guang had introduced Jiang Li as her brother.

That witness comment was immediately praised by more than 100,000 people, pinning Xue Ziang to the pillar of shame!

As the party concerned, Xue Ziang naturally saw the number of reposts his Weibo got. He didn't have high EQ, to begin with. Otherwise, he wouldn't have casually discussed others in public. With the way things had turned out, he had long become flustered. He asked in a daze, "President Chu, what should

I do? My reputation will be ruined if this continues. Should I post an apology on Weibo?"

"Your reputation won't be ruined if you apologize?" Chu Yao rolled her eyes at him angrily. She composed herself and said, "The matter has already developed to this point. It's not something that can be resolved with an apology."

"Then, what should we do?" Xue Ziang was flustered and said gloomily, "Why are Zhui Guang and Jiang Li siblings?"

Chu Yao couldn't be bothered to tell him. She turned to her assistant and said, "Ziang still has seven or eight endorsements. If this goes on, the companies will look for compensation. I'll call Weibo and ask them to suppress the news first."

Hearing her words, Xue Ziang and the others in the ward relaxed a little.

Chu Yao's family had a strong background in Beijing. As long as they suppressed it, there was still room for discussion.

With that, she didn't delay any longer and quickly called home..
