

The Mans Decree - The Mans Decree Chapter 3420

Natasha and Anders hastily strode out of the cave. Anders grabbed a disciple of Bulrush Sect and demanded, “What’s going on here? Is someone here to occupy the celestial ore mine?”

“That’s not it, Mr. Hendley. Someone dug out a precious orb that’s likely a rare treasure!” the disciple answered.

When Anders heard that, he quickly headed in the direction everyone was hurrying in, and Natasha followed suit.

At the heart of the celestial ore mine, a disciple of Ruby Sect was reasoning with the disciples of Bulrush Sect with the Stillwind Orb in hand.

“It was a disciple of Ruby Sect who found this precious orb. Why should we give it to you?”

At that, a lanky disciple of Bulrush Sect declared, “We were the ones who discovered this entire celestial ore mine, so everything in here is naturally ours. Hurry up and hand it over.”

“Exactly! It’s ours, so hurry up and hand it over!”

“Hand it over! Otherwise, we’ll resort to force!”

All the disciples of Bulrush Sect chorused in agreement. The disciples of Ruby Sect did not back down either, each retorting loudly, “It belongs to whoever found it. Why should we give it to you?”

“We were the ones who found it, yet you want to snatch it away?”

“Don’t mistake Ruby Sect as easy prey!”

The disciples of Bulrush Sect and Ruby Sect were on the verge of breaking into a fight.

“Everyone, shut up!”

Anders and Natasha happened to arrive just then. They ordered the crowd to cease making noise.

Upon seeing that Natasha had arrived, that disciple of Ruby Sect swiftly handed the Stillwind Orb to her. “Ms. Fuller, this precious orb was found by a disciple of Ruby Sect, but those from Bulrush Sect want to snatch it away.”

Natasha took the Stillwind Orb from her disciple. At once, her eyes lit up. Not only could she sense the gusts of wind within it, but she could also hear the whistling of the wind.

Although she had no idea about the name of Stillwind Orb, she knew it had to be a magical item since it was found in the Celestial Battlefield.

Anders' eyes likewise lit up at the sight of the Stillwind Orb in Natasha's hand. He hurriedly uttered, "Let me see what kind of magical item this precious orb is, Ms. Fuller."

While saying that, he reached out to take it. However, Natasha dodged and put the Stillwind Orb away in the next heartbeat.

Following her action, Anders' expression promptly turned icy.

"What's the meaning of this, Ms. Fuller? Don't forget that I was the one who first found the entire celestial ore mine before calling you and your disciples over. Bulrush Sect should have priority over the magical items found in here," he stated frostily.

"That isn't right, Mr. Hendley. This magical item naturally belongs to whoever found it. Besides, this celestial ore mine is in the Celestial Battlefield. It's not yours. Why should anything found in it be given to you?" Natasha countered.

After Anders heard that, his expression turned even grimmer, and his aura grew in intensity. Perceiving that, Natasha did the same, prepared to fight him. Their disciples all dropped into fighting stances as well.

"I hope you think twice, Ms. Fuller. Is it worth making an enemy out of me for an orb you don't even know its functions?" Anders threatened Natasha.

"I think it's worth it." Natasha snickered.

"Since you said that, then don't blame me for showing you no mercy."

Anders' brows knitted together.

"So be it. I'm not scared of you."

Indeed, Natasha was not the least bit afraid.

In the blink of an eye, the atmosphere at the scene reached a freezing point. Everyone was exceedingly tensed, waiting for the other to make the first move.

At that turn of events, Feenix, who was hiding among the disciples of Ruby Sect, abruptly shot out her hand and sent one of the disciples of Bulrush Sect flying.

That immediately lit the fuse.

"Kill them!"

"Kill them!"

Ruby Sect and Bulrush Sect engaged in battle outright. The couple who were intertwined intimately earlier struck at each other mercilessly then.

The battle in the mine attracted those outside to join in the fray. Amidst the chaos, Kai slipped into the celestial ore mine. Feenix quickly broke free from the battlefield and headed toward Izolda and Kiara.

“Izolda! Kiara!” she called out softly. The two girls were confined within an arcane array, and she had no way of breaking it.

Hearing someone calling their names, Izolda and Kiara slowly opened their eyes. When they laid eyes on Feenix, excitement brimmed in their eyes, and they both cried.

“Don’t make any noise or get excited. I’ll figure out a way to save you two,” Feenix comforted them and urged them not to be overly emotional.

Soon, Kai’s figure appeared, and she hastily called him over. The instant he saw Izolda and Kiara in a pathetic state, murder blazed hotly in his eyes. The two girls had been violated so badly that they were almost unrecognizable at that moment.

He could not even bring himself to imagine the exact torture they had experienced.

Kai merely gave the arcane array a cursory glance before he pressed a hand against it lightly. It instantly disappeared.

It was the simplest confinement arcane array. Those unfamiliar with arcane arrays would find it beyond difficult to break, but to Kai, it was a piece of cake.

When the arcane array had been dismantled, Kai and Feenix swiftly supported Izolda and Kiara away from the celestial ore mine.

Everyone was battling fervently in the celestial ore mine for the Stillwind Orb right then, so no one noticed them.

Only after Kai and the others had left the celestial ore mine did they breathe a long sigh of relief.

“Take them two away, Feenix. I’ll stay and keep guard here,” Kai instructed.

“Let’s leave together, Master.”

Sensing the murderous intent emanating from him, Feenix feared that he would go into the celestial ore mine again to exact revenge if he were to stay there alone.

“Go with the two of them. I know what I’m doing.”

Kai, however, insisted that Feenix and the two girls leave. It was only after they had left that he could make his move without restraint. No matter what, he was determined to have all of Bulrush Sect pay for their actions.

Knowing that further dissuasion would not do any good, Feenix left with Izolda and Kiara. Kai stood quietly outside the mouth of the celestial ore mine with Dragonslayer Sword in hand.

So long as anyone stepped out of the cave, he would kill them with a strike without holding back, regardless of whether it was a disciple of Ruby Sect or Bulrush Sect.

By then, the fight in the celestial ore mine was drawing to an end. Ruby Sect was gradually losing “Hurry up and leave, Ms. Fuller. We’ll cover your back!” three disciples of Ruby Sect shouted at Natasha.

Natasha was already injured then, and she would definitely lose if she continued fighting. She spun on her heels and sprinted toward the mouth of the cave.

“Where are you going?”

Anders was also in a towering rage at that moment. Not only were more than half of his disciples dead, but he was also injured himself. If Natasha were to get away, his losses would have been in vain.

Furthermore, the Stillwind Orb was still in her hands. Just as he leaped up to give chase, three disciples of Ruby Sect blocked his path.

Upon seeing that, the disciples of Bulrush Sect sprang into action, engaging the three disciples of Ruby Sect so Anders could pursue Natasha.

Natasha was incredibly fast, and she streaked out of the cave in a blur. Never had it crossed her mind that someone was keeping guard outside the cave. No sooner had she left the cave than a cold glint slashed at her.

Her heart jolted, and she hurriedly dodged. The cold glint slashed across her arm. In a flash, a long wound manifested.

As she stared at her wound, terror was etched across her features.

If I hadn’t dodged in time just now, my head would probably have been severed!

She glared at Kai in fury. When she discovered it was a mere First Level Tribulator cultivator who attacked her, her rage mounted.
