Married at First Sight Chapter 2461-Elisa also laughed. She said with a smile: "Sister-in-law, please stop laughing at me. I am nervous, too nervous. My elder brother will probably be more nervous than me."

Alice: "Okay, I promise not to laugh. Laugh, and I feel a little less pain."

Elisa said: "Then you laugh, if your stomach doesn't hurt from laughing, smile more, I am thick-skinned, and I am not afraid of laughing."

Alice hugged her stomach and laughed, and soon frowned again and said: "It hurts. The pain is more obvious now than before, and it is getting more and more intensive."

After hearing this, Audrey immediately commanded: "Go to the hospital, go to the hospital quickly."

Although the second When giving birth to a baby, many people have pain for at least a day and a half before giving birth. If the time is longer, the pain lasts for two or three days, but some people only need a few hours from stomach pain to delivery.

Maybe Alice didn't need to struggle for so long.

So, the whole family rushed Alice to the hospital.

On the way to the hospital, Alice called Clive. When Clive answered the phone, she said to him: "Clive, I have a stomachache. I should be giving birth. My parents and Elisa are sending me to the hospital. We're on the way. If you have time, go to the hospital and wait."

Clive: "You're about to give birth? Isn't it still half a month before the due date? Why are you giving birth now? Why don't you have time? Okay, now that I'm very free, have you gone to the hospital? Which hospital? I'll go right away; don't be afraid; I'll go right away."

When Clive heard that Alice was about to give birth, he left what he was doing, got up, and walked out. He was about to leave, but he went in the wrong direction; instead of going out, he walked into the lounge.

A senior manager who came to report to him watched Clive walk into the lounge in astonishment.

Wasn't Clive going out?

Clive's wife was about to give birth, manager clearly heard Clive said that he would go to the hospital soon, why did he run into the lounge?

The manager thought that Clive went into the lounge to get something.

Soon, Clive came out. Apart from still talking on the phone, he didn't get anything in his hands.

The manager realized that the president was too impatient and had gone to the wrong place.

With Clive's current condition, could he go to the hospital safely? Would he go to the wrong hospital?

Clive: "Central Hospital, right? Okay, I'll go right away. Alice, don't be nervous. Don't worry. I'm here."

Alice said, "I'm not nervous. My baby and I are fine. My fetal position is in good condition. The doctor said it can be a normal delivery, maybe when you arrive at the hospital, the baby has already been born. Drive slowly. No, stop driving, let the driver take you."

Alice knew Clive very well. At this moment, Clive was asked to drive to the hospital, fearing that something might happen.

Even if nothing happens, he would drive fast.

Clive: "I'm fine. I'll go there now."

Alice: "Okay, anyway, let the driver drive. I won't talk to you anymore. We are almost at the hospital."

The main reason was that the abdominal pain was getting more and more painful, and it was a bit unbearable.

"Sister-in-law, are you okay?" Elisa, who was sitting next to Alice, asked with concern when she saw her sister-in-law's uncomfortable look.

“It’s getting more and more painful.” Alice frowned and said, “I also really want to go to the bathroom.”

Audrey said, “Enough, you’re almost at the hospital, and the pain is getting worse. you feel like you want to go to the bathroom. It’s true that you’re about to give birth. This child has been tossing about for nine and a half months, and I don’t want to toss you when it’s born.”

Judging from her experience, Alice went to the hospital, and after a checkup, she would enter the delivery room.

Thinking of a new member of the family, Audrey was nervous and looking forward to it.
