

Married At First Sight Chapter 3189

Married At First Sight Chapter 3189-Tinsley said, “Sister, it’s already good that you can eat it. Looking at the pastry chefs in Annenburg, how many of them can make dim sum that you can eat?”

Elora choked.

She looked at Tinsley for a moment and then asked, “Tinsley, tell me honestly, did you fall in love with Tatum at first sight? You pay a lot of attention to him, and you also value whether he can become my chef.

If you like him, you can change your chef and ask him to be your chef. You can eat his delicious food every day, and you’ll fall in love with him. However, he is just a chef. There is a big gap in reality. I don’t know if the second uncle and second aunt can accept a chef as their son-in-law. If it were my parents, my parents would definitely disagree.”

The Ormond family was one of Annenburg’s most affluent. The family had a big business, so the requirements for choosing a son-in-law were naturally very high.

Elora didn’t mean to look down on others, but she also agreed that people of the same level should find partners of the same level. This way, the gap was smaller, knowledge and vision were similar, and it was easier to find common topics.

Tinsley smiled and said, “Sister, I really admire Tatum. I really think his cooking skills are very good. He is the youngest chef I have ever seen. Although he is a chef, I think he is gentle, elegant, and has extraordinary bearing. He will definitely become a great person in the future.”

After Tinsley finished speaking, she curled her lips and said, “My parents have high standards and always feel that no man in the world is worthy of me. They think that I am an immortal descended from heaven, with a beautiful country, unparalleled elegance, and a prince.

I often lament that there are no more princes in our country; otherwise, I would definitely be able to marry into the royal family and become a princess.”

Tinsley said a little helplessly, “I don’t want to get married now. When I do, I will find someone according to my own wishes. I don’t want to listen to my parents’ arrangements.”

Elora said, “Second uncle and second aunt are very demanding, and that’s what you deserve. You are so good. You can find it yourself, but you must obtain parental consent. They have eaten more salt than we do rice. We still need to let them control the situation. You can’t marry a Phoenix man, right?

I won’t marry a Phoenix man. In our area, those who can match our family are either married or haven’t grown up yet. I think it will be difficult for me to choose between those families.”

Let's see if they can ignite some sparks with the young talents from the neighboring city.

Tinsley looked at Elora again and said with a smile, "Sister, you're not married yet. Why should I be anxious? I will wait until you get married. If you live a happy life after getting married, then I will consider getting married."

"I always feel that marriage is not very friendly to women." Tinsley sighed.

Many female employees in her department were busy enough at work. They had to buy groceries, cook, take care of their children, help with homework, and clean the house when they got home from work every day. Only in the dead of night, when everyone was asleep, could they have a little bit of energy.

Many modern women are forced by life to become superwomen. Children always look to their mother for anything, as if she is invincible.

Some husbands will be considerate of their wives and help share some housework. Some people are like great men. When they get home from work, they will slump on the sofa, motionless, waiting for their wives to cook and eat.

After eating, the bowls were not washed, and the table was not cleared.

Tinsley listened to them talk a lot.

When women get together, they mostly talk about how their children, husbands, and parents-in-law are doing.

It wasn't just her parents who were at fault. Although her parents had a good relationship and at least her father didn't cheat on her, her mother had always been accommodating to her father.

Was her mother useless?

No, her mother was also very powerful when she was young.

It was only when she grew up and was able to take over that her parents stepped back to the second line.
