Chapter 4162

Sonny still needed someone to take care of him.

Duncan added, “Then during summer break—you’ll have two whole months off. You can stay for the entire vacation. And once you graduate from kindergarten and transfer to an elementary school in Jensburg, you’ll see your mom every day. My business will also be moving there, so our family of three will finally be together.”

Lewis Group already had business in Jensburg, though not a large presence.

Since Liberty would be settling there long-term, Duncan had increased his investment in the city, developing new markets. As president, he needed to oversee things personally, making it the perfect opportunity to stay in Jensburg and be with his wife and child.

Sonny pouted. “Okay.”

Then his attention snapped back to Liberty. “Mom, you still haven’t answered my question!”

Liberty chuckled. “I’m taking it easy tonight—no late-night meetings or events. I’m already on my way home. It’s getting late for you too, so I wanted to call before you went to bed. Sonny, do you miss me? Because I miss you so much.”

“I do, Mom! I miss you a lot.” Sonny then added excitedly, “Mom, when you get home, can you take a video of our new house and send it to Aunt Serenity’s phone? I want to see it.”

Serenity had already told him that Liberty was no longer staying in a hotel—she had moved into their new home in Jensburg. She also mentioned that the house was huge, with plenty of space to run and play. Sonny wouldn’t feel bored, even if he played by himself.

Now, he couldn’t wait to visit.

He even planned to invite Titus over during summer vacation. Since the new house was big enough, his friend could finally stay with him.

Whenever Sonny visited Titus, he always stayed at Titus's place, but when Titus came over, he had to stay at a hotel. Sonny had always felt bad about that—it didn't seem hospitable enough.

Now, with multiple homes and plenty of rooms, he could finally host his friends properly.

Sonny had thought it all through.

Liberty smiled. "Alright, tomorrow morning, when I go for my run, I'll take a video of the yard for you. Have you finished your homework?"

"I also have to practice calligraphy, piano, and martial arts—I can't slack off." Sonny added proudly, "Mom, it's already late. How could I not be done with my homework? That little bit of work takes me no time at all. I was just playing chess with Grandpa York."

Liberty asked, "So, did you win?"

Sonny's face turned slightly red. Embarrassed, he admitted, "No... I lose to Grandpa York every time. He's just too good. But even though I lose, I learn from him. That's why I always win when I play against other kids."

He couldn't help but puff out his chest, feeling proud again.

Liam, who had been listening to Sonny's conversation, chuckled and turned to Serenity. "So that's why Sonny has been pestering me to play chess lately. He's secretly trying to learn my strategies."

Serenity laughed. "He's still young, Dad. Even if he studies chess for years, he won't reach your level."

Liam shook his head. "That's not necessarily true. I don't play often, so I'm not that sharp. But Sonny—he's bright and determined. He learns from his losses and keeps improving. Give him time, and he'll be a real master."

Aside from martial arts, which didn't come as naturally to him, Sonny was far ahead of other kids his age in many areas.

He was a gifted child.

With the right guidance, he could grow into a rising star in the business world of Dongguan City within the next decade.

Serenity gently stroked Sonny's hair, pulling him into her arms. She sat down, letting him nestle against her as they continued the call.

It also made it easier for her to talk to Liberty.
