Chapter 4307

A few minutes later...

“What’s going on outside? There are so many people watching. Even the hotel guests are heading miobas out to see what’s happening,” Kathryn remarked as she stepped out of the elevator.

She noticed the crowd gathering outside and felt a surge of curiosity.

Taking Pedro’s hand, she quickened her pace toward the entrance.

“It’s breathtaking! Who arranged this sea of flowers?” she exclaimed.

“Someone must be planning to propose here. See how the flowers form the shape of a heart?” another guest commented.

“Whoever did this must be incredibly thoughtful and generous,” someone else added.

Hearing the murmurs around her, Kathryn suddenly stopped in her tracks.

Pedro, however, gently pulled her forward. The people he had arranged for the event quickly signaled the crowd to step aside, making way for them.

As the onlookers watched the couple approach, realization dawned on them. This was the proposal they had been speculating about.

When they recognized Kathryn as the eldest daughter of the Farrell family, their initial surprise faded into understanding.

After all, Kathryn and Pedro had always been close. Anyone with a keen eye could tell they were in love.

It was widely known that before the previous head of the Farrell family passed away, she had entrusted her only daughter to Pedro Fraser. Pedro had since been devoted to Kathryn, standing by her side through everything.

Now, seeing him propose, the crowd couldn't help but admire their bond.

Although Kathryn had stepped away from leading the Farrell family and had returned control to its rightful heirs, Pedro had been with her for two years. His unwavering loyalty meant that he would stand by her for life.

He belonged to Kathryn in both life and death.

"Marry him! Marry him!"

"Say yes!"

"Oh, Miss Farrell, if I could, I'd say yes for you! Please, just say yes!"

The crowd grew excited when Kathryn didn't immediately take the bouquet or respond. They were more anxious than Pedro, urging her to accept his proposal.

Kathryn smiled, her face flushed with emotion.

She reached out, took the bouquet, and, in a clear and confident voice, said, "Pedro, I do. I want to marry you."

Pedro had known her answer all along, but hearing it aloud made his grin widen with pure joy.

He took out a diamond ring from a small velvet box, gently took Kathryn's hand, and slid the ring onto her finger before standing up.

Then, without hesitation, he swept her into his arms.

Laughing, Kathryn playfully lifted the bouquet. "Careful, you're going to crush me!"

Pedro spun her around joyfully, causing the crowd to erupt into applause.

Under the warm cheers and blessings of everyone present, Pedro's proposal was a success.
