Chapter 4556

Serenity said, “Then go eat something. Don’t you know how to eat when I’m not around? And you’d better not be staying out that late again. Even if I’m away, I’m setting a hard limit—no social events past 11 p.m. If you’re out later than that, I’m not letting you in when I get home.”

Zachary explained, “I just want to wrap up everything quickly so I can take a few days off when you get back. I thought we could go spend a few days at a beach villa.”

Serenity said firmly, “I don’t care what your excuse is—no more late-night events. And if you dare come home drunk, I’ll move all your stuff into the study. You’ll be sleeping alone.”

Zachary quickly promised, “I’m not drunk, I swear! I only had two drinks. I stayed longer because I was with an important client. They drank, but I didn’t. Everyone knows now—Zachary York barely touches alcohol when he’s out. If I get drunk, my wife will kick me out. Anyone who tries to push drinks on me is basically declaring war with you.”

By now, the entire Wiltspoon business world knew that Zachary was a devoted husband—a total wife guy.

No one dared to pressure him into drinking or smoking. His wife had rules, and he followed them. Everyone respected that.

In fact, many envied him behind his back. Having a wife who cared about his health so much? They wished for that too.

But while most wives did care, many husbands just didn’t listen. Some even scolded their wives for being controlling. Eventually, those women gave up—too heartbroken to keep caring.

Drinking too much ruins your body.

Many have ended up with internal bleeding or worse from alcohol abuse.

“Where are the kids?” Zachary asked, changing the subject. “Are you taking them out today? River should be free—get him to tag along.”

Serenity said, “Go downstairs and eat something first. Don’t stay hungry. You’ve only just recovered from those stomach issues. If you relapse, I’m not taking care of you.”

She’d spent a long time nursing him back to health.

"I'll call you later after you've eaten. I'm thinking of cooking for the kids today unless we decide to head out. Oh, wait—it's probably lunch time already. The chef here probably has food ready, so I don't even need to cook."

Zachary said, "Honestly, I'm not hungry when I'm talking to you. My whole mind is just on you. So, why didn't you take the kids out today? Did River get drunk? I think I saw a video he posted last night."

Serenity grinned. "He didn't drink, but the woman he's interested in did. She got drunk and made a move on him. So this morning, he asked me to go with him to the Lafond family with a little gift—basically to propose marriage. I didn't even bring the kids. Just went with him for the show. It was hilarious. Seventh Brother is sneaky. Romina never saw it coming—he's got her wrapped around his finger."

Thinking about the whole scene, Serenity couldn't stop laughing.

"Honey, your brothers are getting more and more cunning. They really are your students—they've inherited your full bag of tricks."
