Chapter 5: Annoying woman

The figure of a tall, well-built man who had been watching Arabella for a long time, felt pity when he saw the woman who had not stopped crying while hiding her face in a lowered position.

The man who was none other than Billy Harsyam, was actually heartbroken because the woman he loved so much had married. That's why he was looking for a breath of fresh air by taking a walk to the city park. However, he accidentally saw a woman sitting under a shady tree with a heart-rending cry.

Of course there were some people who looked at him and looked at him with pity. Currently, Billy is carrying a large plastic bag. He had just returned from a franchise mini market not far from the park and bought a variety of snacks, drinks and chocolates.

"Did that woman just break up?" Billy walked over to Arabella and had an idea to stop the crying from the woman who was still crying. "Miss, don't move!"

Arabella, who heard the baritone voice, immediately lifted her face which had been looking down and stared at the tall, sturdy man in front of her.

"What?" replied Arabella in a voice shaking with the effect of crying and as if forgetting her puffy and pathetic face.

Billy felt happy when he managed to make the woman who was crying answered. "There's a baby snake behind you."

Arabella reflex rolled her eyes and her body instantly stiffened, unable to move. "Snake? Get rid of the snake quickly. Where is the snake?" Her body immediately shook violently from the effects of fear, but was unable to move because she didn't want to be bitten by a snake.

"So shut up and don't move! The snake is behind you. Let me get rid of it!" Billy pretended to be looking for something to make his acting convincing.

Finally Billy broke the branch of the tree next to him and walked over to the figure of a woman who was still motionless in her place. Not only that, he pretended to get rid of the snake which was only his creation. For a few moments, he still stood tall in front of the woman to be more convincing.

Arabella, who was still silent in her place, just stared ahead. Where she could see long legs under black pants with shiny loafers the figure of a man standing right in front of her. Her body was still bruised because she felt very afraid if her body was pecked by a snake.

"What, did you get rid of the snake?"

"I did, I threw it far earlier. So as not to come back here again." Billy turned to the side and threw away the branch in his hand.

"I'm grateful." A sigh came from Arabella's mouth and she immediately looked back to see how big the snake was behind her. However, she saw nothing and turned to stare at the man who still hadn't left before her. "Where's the snake?"

"Of course it's gone. Do you want the snake to come here again?" asked Billy who pretended to bully the woman in front of him.

Arabella immediately shook her head slowly, "It's not like that, I just want to see how big the snake is. That's all. Not telling the snake to come here." Rise from its crouched position. "Thank you for saving me."

Billy just chuckled and put his hand in front of him. "No problem, just relax. Next time, if you want to cry, hold it until you get home. Don't cry anywhere and invite wild animals to come because you are disturbed by the sound of your crying. Gosh, the ice cream I bought just melted. " Pretend to be annoyed and immediately take an ice cream with chocolate flavor in a plastic bag.

Arabella frowned and stared at the ice cream in the hands of a completely unfamiliar man. Honestly, she really wanted to enjoy the cold and sweet sensation of the ice cream. However, her sense of prestige was much higher and there was no way she would act like a child.

"Just enjoy the ice cream. I'm going home. Thanks again for the help." Arabella walked away leaving the man still holding the ice cream in her hand.

Meanwhile, Billy, who felt he needed a friend to just talk, stopped the woman. "You ungrateful woman!"

Arabella's long legs suddenly stopped when she heard a male baritone voice insulting her. Reflexively she looked back, "What did you say? Don't know how to thank you? Didn't I already say thank you. Are you asking for something in return for helping someone?"

Billy immediately nodded his head. "Yeah, because nothing is free in this world. That's what everyone says." Billy glared at the woman's face who looked very annoyed at him.

"Gosh, so you're asking for money? How much? I'll pay for it." With a sour face, Arabella unzipped her sling bag and reached for her purse. Took two hundred thousand and gave it to the man who was just sitting there. "Well, this is enough, right!"

Billy's reflex was laughing out loud when he saw the woman in front of him handing him the money. "I'm not a beggar." Waving his hand at Arabella. "Go!"

Feeling very upset because what she did was always wrong, Arabella snatched the flavored ice cream from the man's hand. "Today I'm very upset and you're making me even more frustrated."

Arabella landed roughly on the seat not far from where she was standing and immediately opened the ice cream in her hand, then enjoyed it without looking at the unknown man.

Seeing the behavior of the woman who he thought was very funny, made Billy just chuckle. He also landed his body next to the woman he had met for the first time and began to make a sound.

"I came here because I wanted to enjoy all this food." Placing a large plastic bag filled with food in the middle, became a boundary between himself and the woman he did not know his name. "However, seeing you nearly bitten by a snake while you were crying made me forget about that ice cream."

Arabella, who was already busy enjoying the ice cream in her hands, turned to the man who had opened the snack. "Okay, I'm sorry for making your ice cream melt. Are you satisfied now and don't make fun of me an ignorant woman anymore?"

Arabella glanced at the man who was already enjoying the kwaci. Don't forget to glance at the plastic bag containing the many light snacks. "You buy a lot of food like this, like a woman in a breakup."

Billy just chuckled at the sarcastic tone, but it really fit what he was feeling. "You're just like a fortune teller. I'm really heartbroken because the woman I really love has married today. Even though I've been in a relationship for two years. Isn't it like I'm looking after someone else's soul mate?"

Arabella's reflex was laughing out loud when she heard the complaints from a man she didn't know who was complaining about her love fate.

"Poor and poor fate for you! Patience ... patience, yes." Arabella patted the shoulder of the man next to her, still couldn't hold back her laughter because this was the first time she had seen a man break his heart and filled it with lots of food.

Meanwhile, Billy is getting more and more annoyed when he is laughed at by a woman he just met. "Gosh, instead of entertaining, you're laughing at me. You annoying woman!"
