

Chapter 73 Mrs. Preston

"Open the door."

"Yes," The person at the door immediately opened it.

Richard took Caroline's hand and walked straight in; John saw this and hurriedly came forward.

"Mr. Preston, you..." John then looked at Caroline, "This..."

"It's okay," Richard said.

After saying that, Richard took Caroline's hand and walked into the living room and sat on the sofa together.

The three women were shocked when they saw this. John was talking to them just now that when they entered Richard's room, they couldn't speak and just needed to stay quiet.

"Which one offended you just now? Now you can tell me, and I will punish her for you," Richard pulled Caroline's hand over and patted the back of her hand.

Caroline stifled a laugh, coughed, and swept her gaze to the three women in front of her, "Em...actually, I didn't know who was saying bad things about me just now. One of these three women said I was crazy and that I was daydreaming or something."

"Oh? Why did they say that?" Richard was very cooperative and answered Caroline.

"Because I said I came here to accompany my husband, and I said my husband is Richard Preston. So they said I was daydreaming about this," Caroline took Richard's arm and continued, "Honey, do you think I'm daydreaming?"

"Of course not," Richard replied.

"Then are you my husband?" Caroline asked again.

"Of course I am," Richard replied and pinched Caroline's chin.

They were showing their affection in front of the three women.

John was dumbfounded. In private, Richard could spoil Caroline to any point.

But now there are outsiders!

The three women were chosen by Mr. Preston's mother and were sent here; If they accidentally said something about Caroline to the madam, then everything would go wrong.

The three women still did not quite understand what was going on here; Wasn't Richard a golden bachelor? How come he is suddenly someone's husband?

John knew Richard was here to vent anger for Caroline, so he hurriedly scolded those three women, "Go apologize to Miss Caroline!"

Richard raised his hand, and John immediately hung his head.

"John, tell them not to call out Miss Caroline again in the future," Richard said.

"Then we what should we call Miss. Caroline?" John asked.

"Call her Mrs. Preston," Richard said firmly.

"Yes," Although John still felt it was inappropriate, he did not dare to disobey the order. Then John immediately turned to the three women and said, "Go and apologize to Mrs. Preston!"

The three women were terrified; Richard was admitting Caroline's identity on the spot!

The three women immediately went forward and one of them said, "I am really sorry. It is all my fault, so please forgive us."

"Yes, I realize my mistake and please forgive me," another woman said.

"We really are blind!" The last one said with a begging voice.

Caroline was complacent. The despise of those three women was all gone, but now it was replaced by respect!

Richard smiled and asked Caroline, "Do you want to forgive these people?"

"What if I say no?" Caroline asked.

"If you do not forgive them, I will deal with them. You can just tell me what you really want. I can throw them into the sea and feed them to the fish. Will it make you feel better?" he asked.

When Richard said this, he kept staring at Caroline as if there was only Caroline in the world.

"Feed them to the fish?" Caroline asked with curiosity.

The three women immediately turned scared and knelt with a sound of "flutter".

"Please forgive us, please!" the women all said at the same time.

Caroline let out a long sigh. These women were so disgusting to her.

"You know, I am a kind person, so I will not deal with you guys," Caroline said to the women.

Caroline rolled her eyes, "Well... don't let them appear again, I don't want to see them!"

So they could not appear in front of Richard again.

After saying that, Caroline stood up, "Let's go back."

Richard also stood up, "You go first. I still have some business to handle."

"Yes," Caroline swept a glance at the three women and walked out with her head held high.

The three women were relieved to hear Caroline say they were forgiven.

Richard gave John a signal. Richard walked to the door, and John followed.

"Send them to S country," Richard said when his face became dark and sullen.

"But your mother said..." John felt that it was too cruel to do so.

The S country is a poor place where birds wouldn't shit, and the people who were sent there are desperate to leave because of the poor situation!

"You can tell my mother that they offended me," Richard said to John.

"Yes," John nodded his head.

Richard finished his explanation, lifted his leg, and walked out the door.

Caroline returned to the villa alone; As she entered, she did not go to the bedroom, because she was not sleepy at all.

She found Richard's office in the villa open, and she thought there should be a computer so she could just play with it for a while.

This was the reason why Caroline opened the door of the room where Richard worked from home.

The office was quite sophisticated, with a marble desk that looked distinguished.

There was indeed a computer on the table.

Caroline sat in front of the computer; As she was ready to turn on the computer, she found the half-open drawer revealing a corner of the text.

"The South Group."

Maybe it was because she had been with Wendell for too long, that Caroline was very sensitive to the words "The South Group", so she pulled open the drawer.

The document was taken out by her.

This was a detailed record of the South Group of various information documents, a thick book.

Why did Richard investigate Wendell's family? Caroline was confused at first.

When she turned to the last page, Caroline saw the words "strategic plan".

"First of all, produce a video about the sanitation problems of the South Group..."

Caroline looked at this with horror; the more she read, the more horrible she felt. Could it be that the bad news about the South Group was all planned by Richard? Caroline thought.

Why would he do that?! Caroline could not figure it out at all.

Caroline understood something in a trance.

After John's explanation, Richard walked back to his place. When he arrived, he went straight upstairs to see Caroline.

If he wanted to find Caroline, the first place he should go is the bedroom, or outside the villa. She never stayed in other places in the villa.

However, when he came to the bedroom, Richard did not see Caroline.

Where is she? Richard wondered.

Richard suddenly remembered his office door was not closed!

Could it be that Caroline is in his office? Richard felt worried.

He took big steps and walked downwards; his face became sullen while walking.

The office door was not locked, because he was sure that Caroline would not go there.

If Caroline saw that document, it would be a disaster!
Richard didn't want her to find out!

Reward
6

Comments
0