

Master Odell 1221

Chapter 1221 He continued job-hunting while enduring the insults.

The Stocktons notified every company that was related to his major in Glenchester not to hire him so that they could force him to go home.

Even though he was the best in his work, no company dared to defy the Stocktons, hence forcing him to resort to labor work.

He tried being a driver and a delivery man and even picked up jobs that he never heard of before. He did all those just so he could save enough money for a house to marry her.

Although he ran into many competitors from his old days in the process and was even forced to kneel and bow in public, he would return home with her favorite cake and a smile on his face.

The bittersweet memories finally came to an end when tears rolled down her cheeks.

Choking on her emotions, Sherry found it difficult to breathe. She paused all thoughts, wiped her tears away, and gasped for air.

Sherry slept on the couch the entire night.

It was Queenie's scream that jolted her up on the second morning

The moment Sherry opened her eyes, she saw Queenie storming in with Hailey, seemingly ready for a fight.

Sherry rubbed her eyes and sat up straight.

Queenie stood in front of her with her eyes bulging. "Tell me, who is the man you cheated on my brother with?"

Sherry was left speechless. She thought the girl came asking for a fight. She laid back down with her eyes closed. "Someone you don't know."

"Tell me, and I'll know."

"Even if I tell you, you won't know."

"Sherry, stop beating around the bush! Tell me who he is!" She pulled Sherry up from the couch.

Sherry sat straight. She asked,

My eyes gleamed.

Chapter 1223 Sherry grinned as she got up from the couch and headed to the dining table. After setting up all the dishes on the table, she sat down and started eating happily.

The reason why she wanted to return to her quarters was to reach her phone to contact Sylvia so that her friend could help her escape the Stocktons' residence.

John was obviously keeping her in the house as his backup lover.

She had tolerated it before the man got married, but now, she could not bear it for another day.

Meanwhile, in Stockton Tower on the other end of the city, the handsome man had just woken up and was eating breakfast by the window.

His phone was connected to a recorder hidden in his house and it was currently playing the conversation on speaker. The talking had stopped and was replaced by the noise of chewing and gobbling.

The man grinned as he picked up a piece of toast and took a bite of it.

Sherry went back to sleep after breakfast and started munching on snacks as soon as she woke up.

Chapter 1224 As Sherry's eyes widened in shock, she immediately threw herself at him.

John raised his hands, keeping the phone out of her reach.

Despite jumping, no matter how high she leaped, she could not reach it. She grabbed John's collar and shouted, "Give me back the phone!"

John smiled. "Get it if you really want it."

Sherry clenched her teeth. "Don't force me!"

He grinned bewitchingly while keeping the phone high above her reach.

Sherry took a deep breath and jumped onto John, clinging onto him like an octopus before she climbed up to reach for her phone. She made her way up to his shoulder first and then clung to his neck to achieve balance. She reached upward for her phone, but before she could touch it, he put his hand down.

Sherry missed grabbing the phone. She wanted to get off him, but John caught her by the waist.

She glared at her and shouted, "Release me!"

John curled his lips.

Chapter 1225 Sherry's lips moved. "What is it?"

She sounded feeble and helpless.

Queenie frowned upon hearing her meek voice. "I didn't tell my brother about you coming to the quarters, I have no idea how he knew."

"Yeah. Okay." Sherry did not suspect Queenie ratting her out.

After all, Queenie only knew she wanted to come back to the quarters, but she did not know anything about her secret phone.

John obviously knew she came back for her phone, or maybe he already knew about the phone a long time ago.

If she was correct, he already knew about it before she even asked Queenie for help. The question would be how. Sherry was exhausted, mentally and physically. The exhaustion robbed her ability to think. She said to Queenie, "I'm not suspecting you. Just go."

"Sherry, are you okay?" "I'm fine."

The sudden epiphany rushed into Emerence's head. She added, "Ms. Julie, you are really a meticulous person. It is the Stockton family's honor to have you in charge of the house."

Julie smiled. "Aunt Emerence, please don't flatter me. I'm just glad that I can share the burden with Mother and John."

Emerence was moved by Julie's caring and sentimental side. "If only you were Master John's wife, the Stocktons would have thrived in harmony and peace."

Julie's gaze shifted. She wore a strict expression and said,

"Nonsense. John has a family now, and I'm his sister-in-law."

Emerence immediately realized that she had used the wrong words at the wrong time. She immediately apologized, "I'm sorry, Ms. Julie. I didn't mean it. I'm just moved by your personality and capabilities. No one can better take charge of the house than you."

Julie's gaze softened, and so did her tone. "Aunt Emerence, I'm telling you this because I treat you as one

Chapter 1227 Sylvia's worry lingered, so she stayed by Madam Carter's bed and listened to the old lady reminisce about the past. Her memories about Odell's childhood remained vivid as though it happened yesterday. She went on until she got tired and fell asleep.

Sylvia finally got up and walked out of the room.

It was then that the man entered the living room in his handsome suit.

He looked rather nervous when he saw Sylvia come out of Madam Carter's room. He went up to her and asked, "How's Grandmother?"

Sylvia smiled. "She's fine. She's asleep."

His nervous expression was laid to rest.

Sylvia looked at him with crystal clear eyes.

He soon noticed her unusual gaze. He patted her and asked, "Why are you looking at me like that?"

"Grandmother talked a lot about your childhood." Odell squinted. "What did she say?" Sylvia took a step forward, shortening the distance between her and Odell. She was a finger away from going into his embrace. She whispered, "She said when you last message was from two days ago, and it was she who had texted, asking Sherry how she was doing at the Stocktons.

It had been more than two days, yet she had not heard from Sherry.

It was not Sherry's style to be quiet. Even if she was busy, she never missed a text and would not fail to text back for more than twelve hours.

Sylvia frowned.

“What’s wrong?” Odell asked.

“I think something’s happened to Sherry.” Sylvia tapped on Sherry’s number and called her.

The monotone message sounded. “The number you have dialed is not available. Please try again later...”

Sylvia looked at Odell. “Did you receive any updates from your men at the Stocktons in the past two days?”

“No. I’ll go ask them later.”

Sherry bolted up and opened the window.

As soon as the window opened, two bodyguards looked up at her. Her room was on the second floor and it was just a few meters off the ground, so they looked at her cautiously.

Sherry glared at the two of them for a while before returning inside.

The breeze came through the opened window, caressing her face and calming the frustration in her head. She suddenly thought of Sylvia telling her about Odell having his men undercover in the Stocktons' residence.

If she could just locate the men, would she be able to ask them to contact Sylvia and Odell to come to rescue her?

The problem would be how to locate them.

Sherry pondered for a while and suddenly thought of an idea. She walked to the closet by the door and picked up the pen that the previous maid in this room left behind.

Nevertheless, Sherry remained seated.

He walked to her and glanced outside the window. The crowd below the window immediately dispersed .
