Chapter 1241

They were large men all dressed in black. Their faces could not be made out as they were wearing masks and caps.

The car promptly drove out of the villa's district.

The other bodyguards were in close pursuit in their cars.

After swerving past several streets and drifting through several junctions, the black car finally managed to shake off its pursuers after a quick turn around a particular fork of the road near the foot of a cliff. After shaking them off, the driver of the car whistled candidly.

The car continued charging down the road.

Everyone in the car suddenly turned to look at Sherry in unison.

Sherry grinned and thanked them. "Thanks for bailing me out of there."

The two men seated with her in the backseat merely looked at her and did not utter a word.

One of the men reached for something behind his back. It seemed like he wanted to hand something to Sherry.

John kicked the bodyguard who spoke.

He slid across the floor.

The other bodyguards stepped back and were visibly frightened. Julie, Queenie, and Hailey were also afraid of approaching John after observing his wrath.

Silence overtook the room.

John wore an icy expression, nobody dared to speak.

He glared at the crew of bodyguards.

“Are you people complete imbeciles? Those people came to take her away. Why would they even try to hurt her to begin with?” Several bodyguards tried to reiterate what they had seen., “Master Stockton, we’re not lying to you. We know what we saw.”

“The person who took Miss Sherry into the car was an excellent driver. We noticed that there was more than one person in the car and chased after them for a long time but they ended up getting away. We continued down the path until we made a turn around a bend and saw their car parked by the roadside. When we approached, we saw that there wasn’t a single person inside. The car had been abandoned and the only other clue we could find was a puddle of blood a short distance from the car.”

Julie advised Queenie, "Queenie, it's getting late. You should head back and get some rest. I have a gut feeling that Sherry is going to be fine."

"What do you mean she'll be fine? She's missing!" Queenie was sad and furious. "And what's with her anyway? How could she not even bother to tell me that she was going to leave?!"

Julie pursed her lips and only sighed. Hailey quickly stepped forward and held Queenie to comfort her.

Queenie continued cursing Sherry before reluctantly leaving with Hailey.

Julie was the only one left standing.

After making sure that there was no one around, she took a whiff of the lingering smell of blood in the air and smirked with satisfaction.

She took out her phone and sent a message to an unknown number: "Where are the hitmen Shannon hired?"

She received a reply on her phone very shortly after she sent her previous message: "We've been tailing them the entire time and caught all of them when they tried to escape from the woods. We're in a village near the foot of the mountain now."

soon as John had laid out those options, Officer Emmanuel and several police officers entered.

They regarded Shannon with a degree of hostility. The officer in front had a pair of handcuffs at the ready.

It appeared that they had proof of the crimes she had committed.

Shannon was paralyzed with fear.

She immediately threw herself around John's leg and shrieked, "No... No, John, I don't want to go, I don't want to leave you!" John frowned, his expression was filled with irritation. He was running out of patience.

Nobody had ever seen him in such a state. Even Madam Stockton , Queenie , and Julie who had just entered were seized with fear upon noticing the terrifying expression John wielded.

Shannon felt fear run through her veins like an electric shock. She let go of John and stumbled backward

Queenie suddenly suggested, "Mom, I want to go see him too."

Madam Stockton glared at her abruptly. "Hold it right there!"

Queenie expressed her sorrows, "No! I refuse to believe that Sherry is dead. She was right here with me! I'll just take a look at things and be right back."

"It's pretty much concluded that she had fallen off the cliff from the woods. With how high the cliff is and the river underneath it, there's not a chance that she'd still be alive even if she had nine lives!"

Queenie grimaced and cried, "I still need to see it for myself!"

"I forbid you to go!" Madam Stockton called to Julie immediately, "Julie, I want you to keep an eye on her. Get several guards to watch over her as well!"

Since she could not stop John from doing as he pleased, the least she could do was to keep Queenie safe!

Inside a particular private hospital in a very secluded area. The door to the operational ward was flung open, and a host of doctors and nurses marched into the room. Sylvia, who had been sitting next to the hospital bed and guarding Sherry, immediately rose from her seat to make way for the doctors.

Sherry, who had been lying on the bed for a long time, weakly sat up and put her hand out for the doctors.

The doctors swiftly and efficiently put on new bandages on her, injected her with a fresh dosage of medicine, and swapped her IV bag before leaving.

The ward was quiet again.

Sherry leaned back against the head of the bed and gasped for breath.

Every cell in her body was pulsing from the pain. Sylvia looked at her affectionately and asked in a low voice, "Does it hurt? Do you want me to call the doctor again?"

Sherry smiled weakly. "It's fine. I'm Sherry Fowler. Something minor like this is nothing compared to I have been Chapter 1247 She lay on the branch for a while and figured she would try to get help come daytime.

To her surprise, after they had left, she heard yet another round of rustling footsteps. She heard someone approaching the edge of the cliff, quickly followed by someone shining a torchlight over the edge of the cliff, directly casting its blinding lights on her.

She was blinded by the light.

She thought they had come to finish her off. She was instantly seized by a wave of fear and completely paralyzed. A voice told her to throw herself into the raging currents below.

The men holding the torchlight suddenly cried out.

"Over here, Miss Sherry is over here!"

"Get a rope! We've got to help her!"

Sherry looked up at them and asked, "Who are you people?"

They answered, "We work for Master Carter."

Sherry had a nightmare.

She dreamed that she was being chased by someone. Then she fell off the cliff and dangled over a thick branch.

Then, it was John who came to her rescue. Not Sylvia, not Odell.

He was wearing all white and his gold-framed glasses shone underneath the moonlight. He leaned over the edge of the cliff and smiled cunningly at her. "Sherry, you've got two options. Either I pull you up and you come with me, or you can plunge to your death."

Underneath the thick shroud of darkness, his terrible glower seemed to shine like that of the devil's. His smile was crooked and sinister.

She was filled with fear and hatred for the man. She had a feeling that he would torture her to death if she fell into his clutches again.

She looked at the river underneath and threw herself off the branch.

A rush of fear met her at the same ferocity as the raging currents underneath. Then, she shot up from her bed with a loud cry.

Chapter 1249 Sherry leaned against the headboard and played some games on the phone to kill time.

After roughly twenty minutes, she heard footsteps clacking down the corridor.

Shortly after that, Isabel appeared in a red sweater, lugging a suitcase behind her as she padded into the room. She greeted Sherry with bright enthusiasm, "Aunt Sherry, here I am!"

Sherry was very surprised to see her.

She never expected Sylvia to send her darling daughter to keep her company.

After Isabel entered, she threw open her suitcase and revealed its contents. There was not a single piece of clothing or any kind of travel essentials. Instead, it was filled to the brim with all sorts of snacks as well as a tablet which she planned to watch shows with.

The mischievous girl took the tablet and grabbed another handful of snacks before plopping herself on the bed and crawling next to Sherry.

Sherry was struck speechless.

Isabel was not done yet.

She carried a small tray on the bed where she laid out the snacks, then she dragged a trash can next to the bed. After that was done, she turned on the tablet, turned on a popular drama, and turned to Sherry. "Aunt Sherry, this show is pretty popular lately. Do you like it?"

Sherry was dumbfounded, "Yeah, I like

Sylvia frowned and expressed with a voice filled with confusion, "Pick up Sherry? Haven't you kept her locked up in your house this entire time?"

John feigned surprise. "She escaped last night, haven't you heard?"

Sylvia hissed sharply. "You took away her phone. How am I supposed to know?!"

John smiled. "How could you know that I took away her phone if you haven't met her at all?"

Sylvia did a double take then explained,

"I talk to her now and then but recently it's nothing but radio silence so I figured that it must be you who took her phone away. How is she supposed to escape on her own?!"

"That's right, I took her phone away. Still, she managed to sneak away during a dinner party hosted at my house without me noticing until after the fact," John stated with a skeptical look at Sherry.

Sylvia promptly asked, "Where did she run off to?"
