Chapter

1351 'Master Carter transferred me somewhere else because of his stupid wife?! What does that woman know other than blackmailing him by leaving the house? And he compromised?!

Shermaine was furious. Her anger was apparent through the bent fork in her hand.

She believed the man was compromising for the sake of his kids, therefore she could no longer sit back and do nothing

If the stupid woman threatened him using the kids again and forced him to fire her, she would not even be able to see him anymore!

Meanwhile, at a medieval– themed commercial street back at Glenchester, John was shuttling through the crowd with Caprice. Aunt Wanda and two other bodyguards were following them.

The sky was dark, but Caprice still wanted to stroll around. Her big googly eyes moved rapidly and sized up everything in her surroundings with utmost interest.

One of her hands clung to her father's neck while she held the pink-colored bread in her other. She got the bread from the moment she arrived on the street and had been munching on it since. John held her single-handedly while carrying a bunch of pink and yellow toys in the other hand.

Suddenly, Caprice pointed at a shop selling antique souvenirs. An exquisite music box with beautiful carvings caught her attention. "Daddy, that..."

Chapter 1352 Meanwhile, far away in Coastrock City, Sherry was having a phone call with Sylvia. It was then that she received a notification from her mailbox.

The notification made the expression on her face change. "Syl, something came up. I have to go." "Alright. You get busy. I'll go out for a walk," Sylvia said.

Sherry smiled. "Have fun."

The call ended.

Sherry then clicked on the newly received mail and saw the picture John sent her.

It was Caprice quietly nibbling on the pink-colored bread. The girl's pinkish cheek took up half of the screen, and the close-up shot even showed off her long curly eyelashes.

Sherry gasped. She carefully stroked the cheek on the screen.

The girl's googly eyes stared blankly in front. She must be either carried away by the taste of the bread or the thoughts in her mind. She looked absolutely quiet and obedient.

Sherry uncontrollably curled her lips and her expression softened.

Then, she put her phone aside and took the documents out of her drawer. She flipped through the pages of the market research done on Glenchester with a go back soon. If she continued to wander off to other to

"I've transferred here somewhere else. You won't see her again."

"I don't want you to transfer her. I want her out of Carter Corporation," Sylvia said with clenched teeth. She added, "I know she saved Grandmother before, and if you think you owe it to her, give her some money, or refer her to work somewhere else."

The call went silent all of a sudden.

Thoughts were running through the man's mind as he remained quiet for a while.

Sylvia's expression turned cold. "Odell, if you have nothing else to say, that's it."

He remained silent, so she hung up the phone.

Back at the Carters' residence in Westchester, the man's towering figure stood outside the front yard. He stared at the phone after the call ended, and his brows furrowed. Helplessness and annoyance were smeared all over his face.

He had transferred Shermaine somewhere else within the company, and it would be difficult for him to see her anymore.

Chapter 1354 The spacious bedroom returned to silence.

Maybe because of the cold, he suddenly felt the chills. He wished his woman was by his side.

In the past few years, whenever he fell sick, she would be by his side, and he would feel better by hugging her warm and soft body. Now all he got was the icy cold air and emptiness by his side.

He sighed heavily and frowned.

It was then knocks came from the door again.

“Daddy!”

It was Flint.

Odell turned around.

The little guy opened the door and popped his head in

The three of them left the study room and headed back to their game room.

Flint sat down in front of Liam and grabbed his brother's phone to send a voice message to the chat group with their mother. "Mommy, what are you doing?"

Isabel sat down beside them and went on the chat group using her phone.

In less than a minute, Sylvia's reply came in. "Mommy is still outside with two other teachers."

Maybe because Flint's sulky tone caught her attention, she asked, "What happened? Did Daddy scold you guys again?"

Flint pouted. "Daddy didn't scold us. He's sick."

Both Liam and Isabel stared at the screen silently.

Sylvia replied, "Is he sick?"

Flint piped up, "Daddy caught a cold. It has been a whole day."

"Oh, haha, a cold is nothing serious, but it might take a while to go away. Usually, it takes a week to fully recover. You guys don't have to worry about him," Sylvia replied.

Sylvia replied, "I go wherever my legs take me, and I will come back whenever I feel like it. It won't work even if you give me another hundred days."

Odell choked on his reply. "You're abandoning the kids?"

"Stop using the kids to threaten me. If you stop me from coming back, I'll tell Grandmother to throw you out of the house!"

Probably because his anger had taken over his sanity, he chuckled coldly and tapped on the screen furiously.

"Sylvia, you've gotten so audacious, haven't you? Have I been too lenient with you in the past few years?"

“Hmph! Odell, I think it was I who has been too lenient with you. Do you really think I’m afraid of you?”

Odell chuckled. “Really? If you’re not afraid of me, come back tomorrow! I’d like to find out how you are being lenient on me!”

“Stop trying to provoke me! I’m not an idiot like you! I don’t want to go back. I like seeing you mad!”

Odell was silenced. His body was petrified for a few seconds before he continued tapping on the screen. “

At the same time in a hospital in a distant city, Sylvia was sitting on the bench with a saline infusion. The transparent tube with the needle was poked into the back of her h and.

Her brows furrowed as she leaned back feebly.

Maybe because they failed to acclimatize to the local environment, Ms. Kang, Ms. Johnson, and herself caught a fever when they arrived yesterday. Other than the fever, there were symptoms of a cold as well.

Her head was heavy while her body felt weak and everything felt terrible. She could not even speak properly with her coarse voice. She could not even think straight when she received a text from Flint.

In order to not expose her condition to her kids, she texted back and told them she could not talk at the moment.

To her surprise, after she put the phone down, she received a call from Aunt Tonya's number. She did not want Aunt Tonya to worry, so she texted back and informed the same.

Then, she received a text in the rudest tone. "Your man is dying. When are you coming back?"

In Westchester City, Odell headed to the office as soon as he left home.

He strode into the lobby with a frosty look.

The employees and the front desk noticed the look on his face and knew their boss was having a bad day again. No one dared to even make a noise around him.

Odell strode into the elevator without looking at anyone, including Shermaine who was within the crowd.

Shermaine frowned in his direction. 'He did not even look at me? Why is he in such a foul mood? Is it because of that stupid woman again?'

Odell headed to his office and cleared all the work that has been stacked up for the past two days.

During lunch, the new secretary knocked on the door and delivered the lunchbox for him.

The secretary nervously asked, "Sir, it's lunchtime."

Odell glanced and hummed a reply.

Chapter 1359 Only until the two directors perfected the proposal were they released from the torment of their boss.

The spacious office returned to dead silence once more while the sun shone through the window warmly.

His frustrated expression basked in the warm sunlight. He pulled his phone out and tried to call Sylvia, but he could not get through. He tried texting as well, but the message failed to send.

Bam!

He slammed the phone on the table and then called Cliff using the desk phone. "Inform all the division directors to gather at the main meeting room in ten minutes! Tell them to prepare reports for this week's progress. I want to know how things are progressing."

Judging from the tone, Cliff could tell his boss was having a sour mood again and was trying to vent his emotions on the directors. He answered in a small voice, "Yes, sir. I'll inform them right away." After the call, Cliff messaged all the division directors.

One of the directors who was closer to Cliff privately messaged him. "Assistant Bogard, this meeting is a little too rushed, isn't it? I just ran into Director Nickman from the BD division and he was drenched! His shirt was soaked in his own sweat, and he was trying to clean up in the toilet. He told me Master Carter almost scared him to death. Is it because he's having a bad day and wants to vent it on us?"

"He's just having a regular meeting. If you guys are doing your work properly, he won't do anything to you," Cliff answered.

She added, "Master Carter, I don't want to ruin your family. I am not asking for a title. I just want to share your burden. Let me be by your side."

The parking lot fell into dead silence all of a sudden.

Then, a powerful hand pulled both her hands off him and pushed her away.

Shermaine was caught off guard by the sudden shove. She staggered a few steps backward before she lost her balance and fell to the ground with a thud. The light shed its brilliance on her pale white face. She widened her eyes in disbelief.
