

Master Odell 1401

Chapter 1401

Sherry laughed and asked, "Syl, have you and Master Carter come back from your vacation?"

Sylvia replied, "We got home last night."

Sherry said, "Have you guys Clarified everything clearly this time?"

"Yeah, he promised me that there won't be a next time."

Sherry was amused. "Okay."

Sylvia asked, "Sherry, he's always keeping Caprice by his side. It's not a long-term solution for you to keep finding the child behind his back. Do you want to try to talk to him?"

Sherry thought of the scene she had just seen outside the park. If she had not used a body double and gone there herself. she would have been locked up by him again now.

When she contacted him last night. she did not say anything harsh to him on the phone, and she supposed that her tone was quite amicable. However, that damned man still wanted to nab her.

Was it even possible to talk to him?

Sherry frowned and said. "I know, Syl. I'll think about it again."

Sylvia replied, "Okay."

Sylvia smiled and asked her, "Isabel, do you not want to go to the studio with Mommy?" Isabel pursed her lips. "That's not it."

Sylvia smiled. "Then, come to the studio with me today."

With that, she stood up.

Then, she saw Liam standing by the door. The little guy's straight figure was leaning against the door frame, one hand holding a book as he read.

Sylvia smiled and asked him, "Liam, do you want to go to the studio with me?"

Liam looked at her. "Okay."

To prevent the two siblings from fighting again, Sylvia held Isabel in one hand and Flint in the other and took the three of them up to the studio on the third floor.

Sherry waited until most of the people came in before heading outside.

At that moment. several people who were coming through the door were talking as they passed her.

Sherry heard what they were saying.

"Is it true that Master Stockton will come tonight? I heard that he basically stopped attending evening events after he had his daughter."

"I heard from Peter that he will come. Today is the eighth anniversary of our company in Glanchester.
He'll definitely come over."

Sherry could not help but stop in her tracks. Were these all Stockton Tower employees?

John was coming over, so he would bring Caprice over as well. right?

Sherry immediately pulled her scarf up and followed them to a banquet hall.

There was a waiter at the entrance of the hall checking their invitations. She could not sneak in, so she Caprice stomped and ran toward him. Her little figure ran quite fast, and in the blink of an eye, she ran up to him and crashed into his arms.

Then, she knocked him to the ground with a thump.

John leaned back and fell into the snow.

Caprice was confused for a moment before she grinned and started to giggle. She was clearly delighted.

Sherry watched all of this. She could not help but let out a snicker.

In the snow, the father and daughter who fell on the ground immediately turned their heads to look over.

Sherry's expression changed, and she quickly turned her head and hid in a safe corridor.

Outside, in the snow, John carried Caprice up.

Caprice was still craning her neck, looking in the direction where the laughter came from. When she did not see anyone, she frowned and said, "Daddy, I heard someone laughing."

John held her with one hand, put his glasses on with the other, and stood up with her in his arms. He said, "Daddy heard it too."

John did not let Sherry finish and said to Caprice, "Yes. she's that liar."

Caprice pouted her small lips and looked at Sherry, huffing in anger.

Her expression seemed to say. 'Don't even think of lying to me again, you liar!'

Sherry only felt like there was a thorn stuck in her throat. She clenched her hands, but not long after, she smiled at Caprice again. ~ Caprice, I'm really not a liar. I'm your—"

John interrupted her again, "She's a liar, Caprice."

Caprice immediately raised her small hands to cover her ears. After looking at Sherry again, she twisted her face and buried it into John's neck as if saying that she would not be fooled again

John revealed a satisfied smile and looked at Sherry.

About an hour passed before Sherry saw John come out with Caprice in his arms.

In the night, the little girl was wrapped in his jacket with her face tilted on his shoulder, sleeping soundly.

John walked steadily and soon arrived at the parking lot.

Peter and a bodyguard walked beside him.

In a short while, he carried Caprice to his car.

Peter opened the door for him.

The corners of his lips curled up slightly as he looked into the car.

In an instant, his expression turned cold, and he glanced at the bodyguards standing beside him. "Where's Sherry?"

John curled his lips into a wicked smile and did not release his grip.
Sherry used all her strength but could not break free. Her throat choked for a moment before she smiled at him. "Master Stockton, we're alone here. It's not appropriate for you to cling to my hand like this."
John smirked and let her go.
Sherry immediately withdrew her hand and sat up straight, then looked over at Caprice in his arms.
John turned so that his back was facing her.
In his other arm, Caprice was blocked by his figure, thus Sherry could not see the girl at all.
She could only move sideways and only stop until she was almost pressing onto him. Then, she raised her chin and saw the girl's sleeping face through his neckline.
Her eyelashes were thick and curved, and the tip of her nose and lips were red and moist. She was absolutely adorable.
Sherry loved her the more she looked at her. The corners of her mouth curled up uncontrollably, and she reached out from John's shoulder to poke at the girl's fleshy face.

An invisible cold wind seemed to stab her heart.

Sherry's chest felt suffocated.

After a long time, her mood calmed down a bit. The corners of her lips tugged down as she asked, "Then , why are you still going to such great lengths to catch me?"

John's face went cold.

Sherry smiled at him and looked at Caprice in

If he did not catch her, how would she have the chance to look at her baby girl so closely?

The atmosphere was quiet again for a while.

Madam Stockton was staring at Caprice.

John said nothing and handed the girl to his mother.

Madam Stockton's eyes lit up, and she immediately held Caprice like treasure. She stopped telling John to leave the girl at home again.

After a while, they walked into John's yard together.

The house was heated and warm.

Julie subconsciously reached toward John to help him get his coat.

John smiled faintly at her, turned, and handed her the coat. Julie then hung the coat on the hanger beside him.

Madam Stockton held Caprice and sat down on the sofa, staring at the girl's cute and chubby face with joy.

Seeing this, Julie whispered to John, "John, it really will cool down in a few days. Mom likes Caprice a lot. Why don't you leave her home for a few days? Don't worry. We'll take good care of her."

Sherry was hiding in the corner with a pillar standing in the way.

However, for fear of being discovered, she took out her cell phone from her pocket and pretended to be a passerby making a call.

On the other side, Caprice did not see her face and quickly withdrew her eyes. She turned her head to look at her father, who was following her and raised her two little arms toward him.

John instantly bent down and picked her up.

After sitting firmly in his arms, the little girl raised her hand to point at Sherry behind the pillar. "Daddy, someone's making a phone call there."

John also looked over.

Sherry, who was pretending to be on the phone, was speechless.

Did the girl notice her?

Just as she was so nervous that her heart was about to pop out, she heard John's voice." Daddy saw her too."

Then, she heard the sound of him walking up the steps.

Soon, the sound of footsteps disappeared. They must have gone inside.
