Chapter 1411

Once she said she had enough fun, she would never pick up the toy again.

John knew the little girl's temper, and she said she had enough because she did not want to disturb him working.

He smiled and said, "Caprice, I'll play with you again when I finish work, okay?"

Caprice's eyes shone. "Mm-hmm, mm-hmm!"

John returned to his working desk.

Caprice grabbed her little toy and went to the corner of the office, where she had her own personal play area. The space was filled with fluffy stuffed animals.

Since she was bored, she brought all the stuffed animals out and categorized them according to their looks.

Some time later, when

John finally finished reading the documents, he went up to the girl and saw the neatly organized stuffed animals in groups of three around her.

He smiled. He pointed at the pink little pig that was grouped with the yellow tiger and the red bunny, asking, "Caprice, why did you put these three together?"

The little girl pointed at the pig and then the tiger. "This is me, this is you."

Sherry curled her lips into a polite and welcoming smile. "I'm looking for you."
Peter instantly got cautious and nervous. "What is the matter?"
With her smile widened, Sherry said, "Don't be nervous. I'm not asking you to commit a crime."
Peter awkwardly chuckled. "Then, what do you want me to do?"
"I want to know about Caprice."
"Uh... Ms. Caprice is always with Master Stockton. Why don't you just ask him yourself?"
"You know he and I are having a fallout right now. He might not even want to see me."
Peter pursed his lips. "I believe if you could

Peter turned around to a delightful woman with a bright smile, who looked nothing like someone who had cried her lungs out because of her daughter.

Confused, he asked, "Why do you want my contact number?"

"Nothing. I've just admired you for a long time now."

"Do you think I'll believe that?"

"So, yes or no?" Sherry asked.

"Can I say no?" Peter asked meekly.

Sherry switched her expression and covered her face with her hands again.

Peter frowned. With a bitter look, he said, "Fine, fine. I'll give you my contact number."

The silver MPV cruised along the road for a while now.

The silence was broken by a sudden phone call.

The man glanced at the sleeping little girl in his arms. He grabbed his phone using his idle hand and answered the call cautiously, "What is it?"

Peter said in a small voice, "Sir, I ran into Ms. Fowler

Later that night, Sherry collapsed on her bed after cleaning up and texted Peter.

"Assistant Johnson, are you asleep?"

Peter texted her back after a moment. "What's the matter, Ms. Fowler?"

Sherry sent him a smiley face emoji. "Nothing in particular. Do you have time tomorrow?"

Peter texted back after a minute. "Why do you ask?"

She avoided the question and replied with another question. "Are you going out tomorrow? Or are you going back to the office?"

A minute later, Peter's reply came. "I am going out on a business trip tomorrow."

Sherry's eyes gleamed. "Where to?"

"A site inspection on a project in the suburbs."

As John's assistant, Peter usually stayed by John's side. Therefore, if Peter were to go on a business trip, John would probably be with him.

If John went, Caprice would be there too.

Sherry asked, "The suburbs are huge. Which area are you going to?"

It seemed like the girl had captured his grim expression while instructing Peter how to reply to Sherry.

He pinched the girl's cheek and said, "Sorry. I'll eat now.'

He scooped a spoonful of soup into his mouth.

The little girl curled her lips into a sweet smile.

John held Caprice with one hand while he ate using the other hand.

Aunt Wanda and the other two servants cleverly stepped aside and sighed a breath of relief. They had seen John's terrifying expression as well.

John usually looked like a humble gentleman who never showed his temper in public, but when he did, he would be scarier than a demon from hell.

Fortunately, Caprice was around to hold him down, or else Aunt Wanda and the servants would be horrified.

The weather forecast was surprisingly accurate about the snow.

After having been John's assistant for so many years,

Peter was no idiot. He knew that Sherry wanted his contact to approach Caprice and that she would follow him to the site.

Why didn't he tell her about the schedule change?

If he did, he might as well have told her that he informed John about her asking for his contact and then teamed up with John to trick her into going to the site on a snowy day. 1

Sherry was furious and annoyed. She stomped on the spot for a while before striding to where she had gotten off earlier.

Due to the heavy snow, everything before her was white, and her footsteps were swiftly buried under the snow. The whistling wind almost froze her to death, yet no vehicles appeared in her sight.

She was forced to return to the shed by the construction site. The shed had a heater while the two security guards slacked inside.

When they saw Sherry at their door again, they stared at her in awe.

Sherry pointed at the electric scooters by the shed and asked with an awkward smile, "Hey, can I borrow one of your scooters?"

John smiled. "What are you looking at?"

"I'm looking at you," Sherry said while staring at his face with a smile. "I'm looking at your handsome face and gentlemanly demeanor..."

"Enough," John said with a grin.

Sherry forced a smile on her face and asked, "Dear Master Stockton, can you be so kind as to invite me into your car so that I can warm myself up?"

Sherry furrowed her brows and feigned a pitiful look, attempting to arouse John's compassion.

John smiled brightly. "No."

Sherry's expression turned cold. Her expression changed faster than a speeding bullet.

John chuckled. "You want to get into my car? In your next life."

When she finally stopped, she recovered as quickly as possible and looked toward the vehicle.

The silver MPV started and drove off from her sight.

She choked on grief once more. She was in no condition to chase or back away at the moment. She got teary and after fighting the urge for a few moments, she cried uncontrollably.

"That bastard..." She clenched her teeth. She had stuck her face to his shoe and begged him, yet he showed her no mercy at all.

Caprice was her own blood, yet he denied her from seeing the girl.

She wiped her tears away as she sat up. She pulled her phone out and called the man.

If he refused to let her see her daughter, she would continue to ruin his life.

A message had arrived.

He smiled and stroked the girl's cheek while picking up his phone using his other hand. He received a text from a certain chat window.

He tapped on it but noticed it was from Julie.

Slightly disheartened, he opened the chat window.

"John, it's New Year's next month. Usually, the extended family will organize gatherings for us to attend, but Mother wants to organize one ourselves this year. She's planning to do it this weekend. She wants to invite those who are close to us and some of her old friends. She wants to know if you can spare some time to bring Caprice over as well."
