

Master Odell 1431

Chapter 1431

Sherry's hands hung by her side, unmoving. She kept silent while pursing her lips.

Not long after, Julie smiled and said, "What's wrong? Is it inconvenient to call your friend?"

The crowd suddenly burst into ridicule. "Heh... She must be full of nonsense. She doesn't even know any friends of Young Master Sager's."

"Yes, there's no need to ask. She must have stolen the invitation."

"She even dared to steal the invitation that Madam Stockton gave to Young Master Sager. She has a lot of guts."

Sherry clenched her fists and looked toward John.

They were almost two meters apart. John's posture was lazy as he stood there, looking at her. The emotions in his eyes were deep. She could not understand them.

Sherry pursed her lips and said to him seriously, "I really borrowed this invitation. I didn't steal it."

John curled his lips, but his smile did not reach his eyes. Then, do as Julie said and prove that you borrowed the invitation."

Sherry's throat choked. "I'm not lying to you!"

he repeated, "Then, do as Julie said."

Chapter 1432

A strong sourness rushed into her eyes, and tears almost instantly flowed out.

Seeing that she was about to be carried out of the banquet hall, Sherry opened her mouth. She wanted to scold him. She wanted to shout that she had given birth to Caprice. She wanted to let all the guests inside know that John, Madam Stockton, and Julie knew her.

However, something seemed to be stuck in her throat, making her unable to say a word.

Madam Stockton and Julie pretended not to know her because they disdained her and did not want other people to know that she was Caprice’s mother.

What about him? Did he also disdain her and not want others to know?

In that case, he should have just let her go. Why did he ask her so much nonsense and even send her to the police station?

Was it because he not only disdained her but hated her so much that he wanted her to go to jail?

Sherry could not help but think of that time when she had fainted in the snow. When she returned to the hotel, he told her, “I feel sick just looking at you.”

The two security guards held Sherry down by her shoulders. She arched her back miserably and looked at the ground.

She did not even need to look up to guess what expressions Jake, Janine, Matthew, and the others were wearing at the moment.

Her face was cold and pale, and her body trembled uncontrollably. She pursed her lips tightly and did not make a sound.

The silence lasted for only a moment before Jake said to Madam Stockton and Julie, "Madam Stockton and Ms. Weiss, my niece grew up in the countryside and wasn't educated well. She grew up before being taken back to the Fowler family. She's stubborn and disobedient, and she doesn't go home, so her parents simply can't control her. We didn't know that she would steal an invitation to sneak in here tonight. We're really sorry about this."

His attitude was respectful, and his tone was flattering.

John looked at Julie.

Julie smiled and said, "John, I think that Ms. Fowler was just a little rude, but she doesn't seem to have any malice. Why don't we just let her apologize to you and let her go?"

John's expression changed slightly as he hummed.

At the same time, he retracted his footsteps. His tightly-knit brows relaxed, and he looked at Sherry with a cold expression.

Julie also looked at Sherry and said politely, "Ms. Fowler, since you're part of the Fowler family, we'll drop this matter. Quickly admit your mistake to John and then leave this place."

After saying that, she shot a look at the two guards who immediately let Sherry go.

Sherry turned her head and raised her eyes to look at them.

John frowned.

Matthew asked angrily, "Where is she? Where did Sherry go?"

The two guards bowed their heads toward John, and one of them replied in a low voice, "We didn't manage to catch her. She got away."

Matthew's eyes flickered as he looked carefully at John.

Janine then said, "Master Stockton, that wild girl is too cunning. Don't worry. As long as she dares to go home, we'll send her to you immediately and make her apologize to you."

John pursed his lips and looked at them with a smile. "I'll be grateful if you would do that, Mr. and Mrs. Fowler."

Seeing him smile and how his tone did not seem to be angry, Matthew and Janine were instantly relieved.

Matthew quickly said, "Yes, as long as she dares to go back, we'll send her to you even if we have to tie her up."

John said nothing and turned back to the hotel.

Sherry pursed her lips and said nothing else.

It was already late at night when she finished getting bandaged. She sat in the car and leaned against the car seat wearily, wanting to close her eyes and sleep.

However, even after a long time, the car did not start.

She could not help but open her eyes, which locked into a pair of beautiful almond eyes.

Carl was right in front of her, appraising her with a hand on his chin.

Sherry frowned at him. "Get away from me."

"Tsk... Sherry, I just saved your life. Is that your attitude toward your savior?" Carl spoke and approached closer.

Sherry curled her lips and raised her fist at the same time.

Carl pursed his lips and laughed dryly. "Heh... I'm not afraid of him, but we're in Glanchester now. This is his territory, after all. Give me some time. I have to make a long-term plan."

Sherry ignored him. She knew Carl too well. Although he was like a dandy, he was not a fool. If it was someone he could bully, he would be sure to beat them to death, but when it came to John, he was just playing lip service. It was impossible to offend John easily.

The elevator soon stopped at her floor. She took a step and limped out.

Carl followed her all the way to her room.

Sherry turned back to him. "Master Sager, do you need something else?"

Carl leaned his back on the wall by her door and said with a smile, "No, I just thought that the weather here is too cold and wanted to ask if you need someone to warm your bed at night."

Sherry said, "No."

Soon, he opened his eyes again.

That woman was able to get her hands on the invitation for Young Master Sager, so she must have an ulterior motive.

As long as she was willing to tell him carefully what she had done before and after getting the invitation, then obediently admit her mistake of leaving for two years, since she went to such great lengths to see Caprice, he could give her one last chance and let Caprice call her Mom.

However, time passed little by little, and it was almost one in the morning. Caprice also fell asleep in his arms, but that woman still did not come back.

Did she not plan on coming back?

His expression was broody, and he took out his phone to pull up her number.

Just as his finger was about to touch the screen, he quickly withdrew his hand again. She was the one who made a mistake and refused to admit it.

Why should he call her?

Sherry did know a lot of people in Westchester. Even Mrs. Carter was her good friend. However, Westchester and Glanchester were far apart, and Odell Carter had nothing to do with the Sager family.

She should not have gone to Odell for help. In that case, which friend did she ask to 'borrow' the invitation from Young Master Sager?

"John, I don't think Ms. Fowler borrowed the invitation," Julie looked at his face and said in a small voice.

John looked at her.

Julie thought of something and said, "Glanchester will be holding the annual Business Association conference in a week. Master Carrel will be there, and he said that Young Master Sager will attend as well. You can just ask Young Master Sager face to face."

John's expression changed slightly as he hummed.

Looking a little tired, he raised his hand and pressed it to his temple, then said to her, "It's late. You can go back to rest now."

Julie smiled at him. "Okay. You rest early too.

The driver quickly stopped the car.
John carried Caprice out of the car and went straight into the hotel.
The hotel manager saw him coming and quickly welcomed him, saying carefully, "Master Stockton, Ms.
Fowler still hasn't come back today."
John gave him a small smile. "Please take me to her room."
The hotel manager instantly showed a troubled expression. "That's... Our hotel has a rule that no one is allowed to enter a guest's room when the guest is not present."
John's eyes darkened. His face which still carried a modest smile was gloomy.
The hotel manager's expression changed, and he quickly changed his tune, saying, "Everyone except for you, Master Stockton. I'll take you there immediately."
John smiled. "Sorry for the trouble."
"It's no trouble at all." The hotel manager raised his hand to wipe the cold sweat on his forehead and quickly led John inside.
