Chapter 1761

Sherry hid outside the door, gulping as she watched the girl munching on her food.

It was then she sensed a gaze on her.

She looked up and met John's gaze. The man was looking at her with a smile.

Embarrassed, Sherry quickly turned away and sat back on the couch. She picked up the tablet and played a cartoon on it, pretending that she was watching.

It was raining like cats and dogs outside, which formed a contrast to the quiet environment indoors.

The smell of food from the tablet stimulated her saliva. She had lost count of how many times she gulped because of the temptation.

Then, Caprice's chubby figure waddled towards her from the kitchen. She was holding two pieces of meatloaf in each hand, one bitten into and one still fresh.

She handed the fresh one to Sherry. "Mommy, Daddy made this for you. It's delicious!"

Sherry was surprised.

John's eyes brightened with joy. He said, "It seems like the storm is not stopping anytime soon."

Sherry furrowed her brows.

It was raining cats and dogs outside, and she had no idea where John lived, so it would be dangerous for him to go back now.

Irritated, she said, "Then, you can stay here for the night."

John curled his lips. Even Caprice giggled out of delight.

Sherry added, "The couch is yours."

She only had one room in her apartment, and there was no way she would let the man sleep on the same bed.

John smiled and said, "Of course."

Caprice squealed happily, "Yay! Caprice can finally sleep with Daddy!" It had been a while since the girl slept with her father.

While she was trying to wrap her head around the situation, Caprice's adorable voice came from outside, so Sherry got out of bed.

The girl was already dressed and had just come back with John. The table was filled with a luxurious breakfast spread, and the girl was eating a bun in John's arms.

When the father and daughter heard the door opening, they turned to her.

Caprice's eyes gleamed. She called out adorably, "Mommy, you are awake!"

John smiled. "Morning."

Sherry's eyes flickered. "How did I end up in the bedroom?" She clearly remembered sleeping on the couch last night.

John said with a smile, "I carried you in."

Sherry frowned.

Caprice stopped running immediately. She looked up at her father and asked in a worried tone, "Daddy, how did you catch a cold?"

Sherry looked away and turned a deaf ear.

John glanced at her and then said to Caprice, "Maybe because I got wet in the rain last night." He added,
"Don't worry, Caprice. I've taken medicine. I'll be healthy in no time."

Caprice hummed a reply. She waddled forth to her father, crawled up to his arms, and touched his forehead with her warm little hands. "Caprice gives you warmth."

John smiled. "Thank you, Caprice."

"You are welcome, Daddy."

Irritated, Sherry pursed her lips. She pulled her phone out and located the breakfast shop that John had ordered from yesterday. She ordered extra soup after getting the mains, and since she did not want him to think that she got the soup just for him, she got three bowls of the same soup.

Sherry went to the bathroom to wash up before she went out.

When she opened the door, she saw the man dressing up in front of her. He had his pants on and was putting on his shirt.

The first light shone through the window and highlighted his slender and fit physique.

Sherry's eyes widened.

John turned around at the same time.

Flustered, her eyes flickered. She bellowed, "Why are you dressing up now?!"

John replied with a smile, "I usually wake up around this hour to get dressed." He buttoned his shirt as he spoke, covering his beautiful body underneath the shirt.

Sherry regained her calm and said, "Do not put on your shirt here."

He asked, "Then, where should I wear my shirt?"

Carl frowned. His expression spelled frustration.

Ada burst into tears again. "Carl, I really like you."

"I have a ton of women who like me. Do I need to marry every single one of them?" Carl bellowed.

Ada continued, "But Sherry doesn't even like you and she's been tempting you. She's still seeing her ex-husband! She's a bitch who has her feet in two boats!"

Carl's gaze turned frosty as he glared at her. "Shut the fuck up!"

Ada had never seen such anger from Carl. Startled, she immediately pursed her lips in silence.

Work got extra busy with an urgent case and some meetings.

Sherry worked tirelessly for hours before settling them. She ran to the toilet to release herself after holding it in for hours. She sighed a breath of relief as soon as she sat down on the toilet.

When she was done and wanted to head out, she heard some women talking outside.

“Did you hear about this morning?”

“Ada and Carl?”

“Yeah.”

“Of course. We were there.”

Suddenly, his phone rang.

It was Jason.

John answered it and put it next to his ear. "What is it?"

Jason said, "Sir, Ada Wright and Carl Sager got into a big argument in front of the Sagers' office this morning. She's trying to be with Carl but got rejected in front of a crowd. Madam was there when that happened, but she watched from a corner. Ada spotted her and shouted at her, but she ignored her and left."

John went silent for a moment. "Ada Wright? Ron Wright's niece?"

"Yes. You ordered us to keep an eye out for Ron Wright's movements, and we spotted Ada being thrown out of the mansion by Ron's new wife. Ron did not even try to hold her back. She stayed in a five-star hotel for a night and went straight to Carl this morning.

Ada was Ron's niece. Now that Ron was evicted from the Sagers, Ada would follow as well.

Ron's new wife, Willow, had evicted her from their new mansion, and she stayed in a five-star hotel for a night. It seemed like she could not leave her luxurious and lavish life behind, thus she hassled Carl in the morning.

Now that Carl rejected her, would she simply step away from all this?

Sherry's car was parked in the open parking lot outside the building.

When she arrived at the parking lot but before she could reach her car, she heard several women squealing excitedly.

"My gosh! He's so handsome! He looks much better in person!"

"He's so charming. No wonder he's the richest man in Glenchester"

"I'm so jealous of Ms. Fowler."

Sherry was speechless when she heard the gossip.

The women were employees of the company. They were fangirling over a man with a bouquet of roses by Sherry's car-John.

The white shirt and slim-fit pants set off his slender physique. His golden-framed glasses hung over his tall nose, complementing his charming and enchanting eyes. He must have stood there for some time now.
