Chapter 1901

Heather got to Liam and used him to threaten her father to cancel the contract with Rockon Technology but she got scolded by her father because of it.

Until now, her father had not forgiven her.

Now that the idiot appeared right in front of her crosshair, it would be a great opportunity for her to vent her grievance.

With that in mind, Heather narrowed her eyes, and smiled elegantly before she headed into the hall.

The hall was filled with guests.

Brand ambassadors were promoting jewelries that they endorsed.

Caprice did not want to be drowned by the crowd, so she and Trey grabbed their glasses and headed over to the display cases to view the jewelries.

Each jewelry was designed uniquely and was nothing short of extravagant.

However, they did not win Caprice's heart because she had seen better designs back home.

Caprice clicked her tongue. She turned around to Trey and said, "Let's go, Trey."

Trey had a glance at Heather's bitter look and smirked. He chuckled and said, "Let's go."

Caprice and Trey left, not sparing another glance at Heather.

Even though neither Caprice nor Trey mocked her verbally, Heather almost lashed out at the two of them when she heard Caprice's click of the tongue.

How bold of the idiot to click her tongue at her?

How would the idiot know about her calling her father at Emerald V that day?

Who told her?

Heather's eyes flickered, and her expression remained grim and bitter for quite a while.

As she was trying to adjust her emotions, a commotion happened at the entrance of the hall.

The diamond ear studs were designed to resemble a sunflower.

Each petal was delicately crafted.

Caprice's eyes gleamed brightly.

"Caprice, you like this?" Trey asked. He was beside her the whole time and it caught his attention when Caprice stopped to look at the ear studs.

The staff beside the display case smiled and explained to Caprice, "Madam, this pair of ear studs are designed by our chief designer, Master Sese, and there's only one pair in the whole world. It's also one of our main highlights for the night."

Caprice glanced at the price tag under the ear studs.

One hundred eighty million, as expected of the highlight of the night.

Caprice then looked at Trey.

The man was smiling at her and the expression on his face spelled generosity as if he would buy it for her if she would just ask.

The simple man must have not seen the price tag on the ear studs.

While Caprice was surrounded by Heather and her friends who were trying to embarrass her, a cold and deep voice sounded behind them.

"Pack it."

Caprice looked beyond Heather, and Heather and her friends turned around.

Liam, in his handsome suit, stood before them with the spotlight highlighting his figure. His deep gaze looked captivating.

Caprice was surprised.

Heather's eyes flickered as she immediately stepped aside. Her friends followed her to the side as well.

They wanted to look at Liam but were not bold enough to look him in the eye.

The staff beside the display case came up to Liam and asked, "Master Carter, are you referring to the sunflower ear studs?"

Liam looked at Caprice and hummed a reply. He then pulled a black card out of his pocket and gave it to the staff.

Confused, Caprice furrowed her brows.

Why would Liam buy the sunflower ear studs? A present for Heather?

Caprice looked at Heather.

Heather looked at Liam with eyes full of anticipation. However, for some reason, she did not approach Liam and instead stood quite far away from him.

There was a hint of reverence on her face as well.

Was Liam mad at her for what she said earlier?

What a strange couple!

Caprice failed to understand Liam's thoughts, so she simply kept an eye out for the two of them.

Soon, the staff packed the pair of sunflower ear studs and gave it to Liam.

Liam held the ear studs in his hand. His deep eyes ignored Heather and disregarded Trey as they were fixated on Caprice.

Caprice blinked innocently.

Why was he looking at her? Could it be that he bought the ear studs for her?

Caprice then looked at Heather, Heather at Caprice.

When the two of them locked eyes, Heather reacted like she saw her arch nemesis.

She glared at Caprice fiercely before walking away with her friends, seemingly going after Liam.

Caprice frowned. She had no idea what happened.

Had Liam gotten into an argument with Heather?

If so, how was she involved? Why did Liam buy her the ear studs?

Caprice looked at the bag hanging on her wrist.

The jewelry box inside the bag had a pair of sunflower ear studs.

Her eyes flickered in confusion before she shrugged nonchalantly.

Liam’s hand froze in the air with the glass of wine.

A momentary silence later, he grinned gently and pleasantly.

The girl liked the present he gave her, so it must mean she liked him.

So why did she reject the engagement?

The thought disheartened him once more.

After Caprice put on the sunflower ear studs, she took the pocket mirror out from her purse for a look.

It was beautiful.

She looked into the mirror, smirking smugly before she cautiously looked around.

No one paid attention to her, so Heather would not know that she secretly swapped her own studs for the sunflower ear studs that Liam bought her.

Even though she did not want to admit it openly, she really liked the sunflower design. Even more so when Liam bought it for her.

It was Heather who pushed her.

Although she disliked trouble or causing a scene, she could not just step away when someone tried to hurt her.

Acrowd gathered outside the fountains, trying to have a look at what happened.

Caprice turned away and wanted to get out to a less crowded place, but she spotted Liam there.

He stood in front of the crowd, gazing at her.

The spotlight blinded her.

She could only recognize him but was unable to see the expression on his face.

She also did not know if he was looking at her or Heather.

She was wretched.

She would rather not be seen by him.

Caprice was slightly stunned.

Liam got up and dragged her up in the process.

He then carried Caprice across the bridge and exited the event hall; they walked past Heather who had just gotten out of the water.

Heather was drenched, sitting on the ground in a wretched state.

Caprice could see her ferocious gaze but the man ignored her existence completely.

He did not even spare a glance at her and did not even pause when he walked past her.

Caprice was dumbfounded.

Heather was his girlfriend.

However, not only did he not save Heather from the water, but he carried Caprice away in front of her and did not even spare a glance at her as if she was some stranger.

Liam was obviously annoyed and displeased.

Caprice pouted.

She decided to be frank and asked, "Isn't she your girlfriend?" Liam's expression shifted.

His furrowed brows ease but his expression looked slightly grimmer.

Startled, Caprice awkwardly wiggled closer to the door.

At the next moment, his big hand held her tiny wrist.

Caprice was pulled back, closer to him than just now.

Her body almost pressed against his.

Liam curled his lips with a hint of frostiness flashing in his eyes.

A while later, he looked Caprice in the eye.

Her fair and wet face made her look like a damsel in distress.

"So you think Heather and I are dating?" Caprice hummed a reply.

"Is that why you reject our engagement?" he asked.

"Mhmm..." Caprice pondered but shook her head.

"Not exactly." "What's the other reason?" "It's because you...you don't..." Caprice lowered her blush-stained face.

She was too embarrassed to utter those words in person.

Liam narrowed his eyes.

His usual calm look was replaced by restlessness and anxiety at the moment.

"What don't you want?" Screech! It was then the car stopped.
