

Master Odell 1951

Chapter 1951

Isabel simply could not take her eyes off Caprice.

It came to a point where Caprice was beginning to feel embarrassed having been stared at for so long. Her face glowed red as she dodged away from Isabel's pointed stare. "Don't look at me like that."

"Haha! Alright." Isabel chuckled and stifled the urge to keep staring. She suddenly gestured at the window. "Caprice, stand over there by the window. Let me take a picture of you.'

"Why do you want to take my picture?"

"I don't have any pictures of you on my phone, so let me have a nice picture of you at least," Isabel said without giving away her true intentions.

Caprice did not look too much into it. She obliged and stood next to the window as she was told, posing as Isabel instructed.

After a while, when Isabel was finally satisfied with the pictures, so she turned to Caprice again. "Why don't you take a short break? I need to use the bathroom, and we will leave in about an hour."

"Alright."

They roared with laughter.
It did not seem like they knew that Isabel was the only daughter of the Carters, much less Caprice's identity.
There was nothing but slight for Isabel in their voice, and that hostility spread toward Caprice who happened to be her partner.
Caprice frowned.
Upon hearing their unruly waves of laughter, Isabel halted and glared sharply at them.
Even with the blinding lights shooting in every direction, there was a piercing shine in her eyes that was unflinching and hostile.
It seemed like she was threatening to pounce on them if any one of them dared to even chuckle at all.

The gossiping women were instantly silenced, not expecting such retaliation from Isabel.

It was only after Isabel led Caprice into the venue that they came back to their senses.

They got so infuriated that they began insulting Isabel again, aware that she could not hear them now.

Isabel was relentless and continued pressing for more details. “You haven’t done anything with my brother other than kissing and this ab-touching?”

Caprice suddenly recalled the previous date she went on with Liam in Carter Tech City.

He had pried the collar of her shirt open, and the two of them had kissed for what seemed like forever, and at one point he... he...

Her face turned red against her will.

Isabel seemed to sense something, and her eyes glimmered with excitement. “Come on, Caprice, you can tell me.”

It was not so much that Caprice was unwilling to share the details with her; it was just too hard for her to talk about it!

She just happened to feel the urge to use the washroom. She quickly shot up and announced, ‘I need to use the washroom.’

Isabel made a face and rose with her. ‘TH go with you.’

“It’s alright, I can go by myself,” Caprice said as she walked towards the washroom.

Isabel followed closely behind her. “That won’t do. I promised my brother that I was

Even if Caprice was not the only daughter of the richest man in Glanchester, Heather had no right to treat Caprice this way. Besides, she had tried to humiliate Caprice time and time again. How could she be so shameless to pretend she was her friend?
Isabel looked at her with a vacant, depreciating look.
Heather did not take kindly to this. She broke out into insults immediately," Isabel, you're just a third-rate actor who climbs in bed with rich men to climb up the social ladder! How dare you insult me?!"

Despite being shielded by Isabel, Caprice had had enough of this. She did not mind Heather hurling insults at her, but she would not stand it if Isabel was the victim, especially when she was spouting such insulting nonsense!

Her patience was at its limit!

"Heather, you're a prick!" she cursed out loud and wanted to step in front of Isabel.

Isabel pulled her back defensively.

"Heather, where have you been? I've been looking for you all night," Sophia said the moment she met her daughter. She then noticed the redness on one side of her face which was also swollen and quickly grew alarmed. "What happened to your face?"

Heather could barely express herself as she was fuming with rage.

Being slapped by a third-rate actor like Isabel was the worst humiliation she had ever gone through in her life!

Upon noticing her silence, Sophia turned to Heather's friends, who were crowded behind her, and asked anxiously, 'What happened to her?'

They informed her, "Aunt Sophia, it was Isabel who hit her."

The exhibition was at the rear of the venue.

Most people must have checked it out already since by the time Caprice and Isabel showed up, there was only the same group of girls they met just now. They were gathered around the diamond.

Caprice and Isabel took a look at the art pieces.

While turning a corner, Isabel accidentally bumped into a staff holding a glass of wine. Its contents spilled onto her wrist.

The staff apologized frantically, "I'm very sorry, miss. Let me take you to the washroom."

Isabel was not bothered. Besides, the washroom was only a short walk away. She turned to Caprice. "Caprice, just hang around over here and check out the collection. I'll be right back."

Caprice obliged and nodded.

Isabel waved the staff off and went to the washroom by herself.

One of the men confronted Caprice. "Girlie, hurry up and hand over the pink diamond. Just so you know, I'm good friends with the Duwaits. I can tell them to go easy on you if you hand it over right now."

Caprice repeated again and again, "I didn't steal it! It was not me!"

"Who else could it be other than you?"

"Shame, the pretty little thing turned out to be a common thief."

"That's right. Hurry up and hand it over. Norman over here has even offered to defend you. You'd hand it over if you know what's good for you."

How did she find herself in this situation? She had never been accused as a thief in her entire life!

She was furious and was at a loss for what to do. What should she do? What was there to do?

She had to look for Isabel! She was the only one who could save her in this situation. She turned toward the washroom.

"She's trying to run! Stop her!" someone cried out.

A wave of silence washed through the crowd.

Even the staff who initially accused Caprice was speechless.

“Isabel, I know you’re trying to protect Caprice, but this is not the right time or place,”

Heather remarked with a faint smile, “Everyone here is a public figure who commands a great deal of respect. There won’t be any common thieves among us.” Someone in the crowd chimed in, “That’s right. We are people of stature. No matter how much we admire the pink diamond, we would never stoop down to something as low as stealing. She was the only one at the scene, so she must have stolen it.”

“You’re just a common actor. Why don’t you mind your own business? If you want to help her, then tell her to hand over the pink diamond peacefully.”

Isabel ignored all of them and turned to the staff. “There should be surveillance cameras. Pull out the footage.”

This immediately silenced the crowd, and they began glancing at the staff. Caprice’s eyes shone.

Everyone held their breaths and watched intently.

Caprice looked on, completely unfazed.

When the staff produced the final item inside the purse, a regular credit card, everyone shared a look of disappointment. It was in that decisive moment when she reached for another concealed pocket in the purse that Caprice never used to stash anything.

Her expression changed the moment her fingers were tucked into the pocket. She removed something from within and put her hands high in the air.

The surface of the pink diamond gleamed underneath the ceiling lights, reflecting its brilliant glow in every direction. It was the necklace along with the treasured gem.

Everyone grew wide-eyed, Caprice most of all. She stammered, "No way... How could it be inside my purse?!"

"Caprice..." Isabel turned to her.

Caprice spoke with a tinge of panic in her voice, "Isabel, it wasn't me! I did not steal it!"

Isabel assured her, "I know, I believe you."

"What a joke! How dare a common actress like you make threats like this?"

Everyone laughed and mocked them, especially Heather. She was not even hiding it anymore as she laughed heartily and savored every moment.

Isabel tried to charge at her again.

Caprice hurriedly stopped her and held her back. "Stop it. Don't be impulsive."

Isabel drew a deep breath. "I'll call my Dad right now."

She had enough!
