

Chapter 108

After attending a few classes, Sophia went to the cafe to meet her friends. To her surprise, all the other classes did not feel as long as the first class did.

As she entered the cafe, she found Sara and Nolan sitting together. They waved at her as she approached them.

"Hello, guys," Sophia said, sitting down in one of the empty chairs.

"What's with your mood?" Nolan asked her.

"Nolan, how can you even ask her that? She is upset because of Bruce," Sara said.

Sophia nodded her head with a sigh. "Yes, she is right. She knows me really well."

Sara smiled at her and mumbled, "By the way, you look hot today in this dress. Where are you planning to go with Alpha, huh?"

"What? Are you dating Alpha?" Nolan asked with a stunned face.

He recalled Bryan being so close to Sophia at the party. Therefore, he concluded that it could indeed be possible. He was relieved that Sophia's mate had accepted her.

Hearing Nolan's question, Sophia felt upset in her heart. However, she did not let it come out in her expression. She shook her head and replied,

"No, we are not dating. I am going to a club with him for a party. That's why I thought of wearing this dress."

She wished she could date Bryan. But that man was so arrogant that he would never think of that.

'What does that mean when you say you want someone but, at the same time, don't want to be committed to her?'

It was confusing to her.

"Wow. I love clubs," Sara muttered with a wink.

Sophia understood the reason why she winked at her. Sara took her mind back to all the times she had spent with Bryan at the club.

"I repeat, it's just a meeting." She reminded Sara.

"Yeah, yeah. Just a minute." Sara sang it like a song.

Sophia did not say anything to her friends about how she felt heartbroken after Bryan broke her heart. She thought she could hide this matter until she found a direction in her life.

After the break, Sophia had to return to her remaining classes to attend.

She hurried to the bus stop after finishing all of her classes.

She sensed a car was following her when she was making her way to the bus stop.

She turned around and spotted Bruce's new car. She stared at it without moving. Bruce got out of the car and smiled awkwardly.

While rubbing the back of his neck, he said,

"I thought I could drop you off at your office."

"No need," she replied with a cold tone.

She did not want to entertain his idea that he could come and talk to her at any time.

"Why?" he asked with an annoyed look.

"Because neither you are my boyfriend nor my friend."

He scoffed at first but then smirked at her. "But I am your ex-boyfriend. If you consider 'ex' from the word, then you can come with me, you know."

She rolled her eyes. "You never flirted with me like that when I was with you."

He was stunned when he realized that she had just posted his remarks to him. So, he replied,

"I became flirty the same way you became sassy. Though it's only for you."

"Go to hell."

Sophia began to walk again. From behind, he spoke out,

"You wanted to make my brother feel jealous, right? How about going to the company with me? He will surely feel jealous."

She stopped and turned to him. "When did I tell you that I want that?" She asked with a confused look.

"You said that in class when I grabbed your wrist."

Sophia almost hit her own head. It was because she was aware that Bruce would release her if she said something like that. That was why she made that statement.

But it seemed like he took it very seriously.

"No, thank you. I have other men to make him jealous; bye," she replied with a grin.

Bruce tightened his fists as he watched her turn away from him and walk in the direction of the bus stop.

Sophia let out a deep breath when she got to the bus. When she found other men glancing at her, she felt uneasy.

She lowered her head to look at the dress and asked herself,

"Did I dress a little too short?"

She tried to ignore the questions roaming around her head and got down from the bus when it arrived close to her company.

When she entered the company, everyone greeted her. The receptionist waved at her and smiled at her while looking at her dress.

"What's wrong with everyone today?" she muttered under her breath.

As she entered the top floor, women were glancing at her. Sophia noticed Miss Selena walking toward her.

"Good noon, Miss Sophia."

"Good noon."

Selena looked at her appearance and said, "I see you dressed yourself for the club meeting. You look younger than your age when you tie your hair like this."

Sophia scratched her head. "Really? Like ten?"

Selena laughed and shook her head. "No, dear. Like a few years younger. Like sixteen."

"Oh, but I am going to be nineteen soon."

"You are pretty. Beautiful outfits enhance your beauty even more."

The compliment caused Sophia to flush. "I was just going to Alpha's cabin."

"But his cabin is empty."

"What? I mean, where is he?"

As a secretary, she should know his whereabouts.

"He was talking with his mother when he was walking out of his cabin. So I guess he went to meet her."

"Oh."

Sophia recalled that when she went to Bryan's private residence, one of the guards had told her that Bryan's mother was a little sick.

'Is she okay?' Sophia thought.

Sophia went to her cabin and began to think about what she would do.

Should she call Bryan to ask about his mother? Though his mother was rude to her last time and even went too far to slap her.

She shook her head and grabbed her phone, then dialed Bryan's number.

After a few rings, he received her call.

"Alpha?" She immediately spoke out but bit her tongue when she realized she sounded desperate.

Bryan replied in a deep voice, which caused her to feel butterflies in her stomach.

"Yes, Miss Berge?"
