

Chapter 136

"Sophia, have you forgotten that tomorrow is Alpha Bryan's birthday? All of the members of the pack are getting ready for his birthday celebration. It is not just a day but it is a festival for all of the members of our pack."

It was on that day that the Alpha's family bestowed blessings upon each and every member of the pack. Due to the fact that it was the birthday of the pack's leader, Alphas from various packs sent birthday presents to the head Alpha.

The royal family also showered the entire pack with gifts. It was a day that the poor people had been waiting for throughout the entire year.

Sophia hung up the phone after talking to her mother.

"Oh my goodness! I can't believe I forgot about his birthday. Each and every year, the entire pack gets together to celebrate his birthday."

Sophia spent the entire night pondering ways in which she could surprise Bryan. This year, he was with her. He cared for her so much. She should do something for him.

"What can I give you, Mate? You are the leader of my pack. I am not rich. I don't have anything to offer you," she muttered while staring at the ceiling.

The next morning,

Sophia called Bryan to find out where he was. But instead of Bryan, Taylor received the call.

"Hello?"

Sophia could not recognize the voice at first. "Who's speaking?"

"Um, it's me, Taylor. Good morning, Sophia."

"Oh, Taylor. Morning. Where is Alpha?"

He took a brief moment before replying,

"He is currently too busy to talk at this time. I am with him. He is in a meeting right now, and I require his presence within the company. Do you have anything that you would like me to convey to him?"

"Still busy?" She mumbled.

After giving it some thought for a while, Sophia finally said, "It's okay. I will call him later."

"Sure."

She hung up the phone with an upset face. But then her face lightened up as her eyes wandered around the living room.

"Yes, I think it's the best idea. I can decorate the place."

She was walking around the room when she heard someone knocking on the door. She rushed to open the door, only to find the man who brought the meals yesterday.

After placing the breakfast on the table, the man turned his attention to her.

"Miss, do you want anything else?"

Sophia nodded her head. "I would appreciate it if you could suggest some stores where I could purchase clothing."

"Sure. There is a shopping mall where you can purchase anything you want. But it is quite far from the hotel. Do you want me to assist you with a rented car?"

Sophia shook her head in denial. "No, thank you. And please don't tell anyone what I asked you."

She did not want Bryan to know about it. After all, she wanted to give him a surprise.

"Okay, Miss," the man said and left.

Sophia glanced at the breakfast. As quickly as she could, she finished it and then got ready to go out.

She left the hotel hurriedly to plan something for Bryan. Since they were in another pack, she had to think about something here.

She got into a taxi and instructed the driver to drop her off at a mall so she could buy some birthday presents. However, instead of taking her to a shopping mall, he took her to the market in the village near the town.

She could not help but feel confused about the place. She then began walking in the direction of the stalls after she had paid the taxi driver.

She could see a lot of things there. Beautiful traditional clothing for men and women. Her gaze was drawn to the customers, who were dressed in clothing that differed from what people wear in the town.

She was certain that Bryan would not like the clothes that the people in the village wore.

Her eyes were drawn to the stunning wooden photo frames that were displayed on one of the counters. It brought back memories of the first time she had met Bryan. She broke the photo frame that day, and he was quite mad at her.

The thought of purchasing one for him caused her to smile.

She was taken aback by the fact that the price was not lower, despite the fact that it was located in the village. Despite this, she selected the most attractive frame she could find and bought it for Bryan.

Sophia kept walking ahead until she came to a place and could not remember which way she had come from.

She tried many different directions, but she was unable to figure out where she should go.

She did not want to disturb Bryan in his meeting, so she thought to call the hotel where they were residing.

But just as she was about to take out her phone from her bag, she realized that she had lost it.

Her eyes widened in fear.

She began to search for her phone in the close stalls but she could not find it.

She wanted to go back, as she asked the salesmen about the hotel. But nobody was familiar with the path that she was referring to.

It seemed she had come far away from the village market.

How would she return now? She could not find any cars there. She realized she had come to the residential area of the villagers. It came as a surprise to her that people in this place did not even understand her language.

Losing her every way to return, she walked like a helpless girl while looking at the ground.

She was very scared of this unknown place.

Suddenly, her body bumped into someone, and she immediately rubbed her forehead.

As soon as she raised her head, she saw a man she did not know wearing a well-made suit that was quite expensive. He looked like a young man in his early twenties.

Sophia took a step back when she felt a dark aura coming from him.

With his brows furrowed, the man asked her,

"Who are you?"
