

Chapter 182

"He knows a way to break the bond?" Sophia mumbled while looking at her brother.

Abraham gave a slight nod of his head. The fact that his sister had to go through yet another heartbreak made him feel upset.

However, in his opinion, she should keep her distance from Alpha Bryan. There was not a single sign of emotion that he had ever seen in Bryan's eyes. He did not even care about his own parents. Then how would he take care of his little sweet sister?

"Sophia, it's good that there's a way. I know it will be difficult for you, but let him go. It's not like you two were in a relationship. It is unfortunate that you ended up being his mate. Otherwise, he was on another path, and you were on another path."

His words pulled her back to reality. "Yes, you are right. It's really unfortunate."

She turned around and went to her room. The moment she closed the door, she slid down against it.

She could not refrain herself anymore. She completely broke down.

"If you had a way to break it, then why did you even ask me to get close to you?"

She sobbed, pulling her legs close to her chest. She did not want her brother to see her in a broken state. That was why she was holding back her tears all the time.

Now she was all alone. Loneliness and the taste of betrayal came back to her.

She did not know how to handle herself. She wanted to scream and ask that man why he did that to her.

"How could you do this to me? What did I do wrong to you?"

She was broken when she met him for the first time. But she could at least repair her heart at that time.

But what would she do now?

He shattered her totally. How could she mend her heart, which was aching for him? What about her wolf, who was howling to be with him?

Only she knew how he broke her heart.

In her mind, she kept going over each and every memory of her and Bryan. She could not just forget them.

His closeness, his taking care of her—everything was not his love.

He was only thinking of her as his toy. Whenever he got angry at her for even talking to another man, it was not that he was jealous because he loved her. It was because she was his toy, and he wanted to be the only one who could play with it.

She leaned her back against the door. Her head was burning as well as her eyes.

When she felt there were no tears left, she stood up. She almost fell to the floor, and her legs became heavy.

She made her way to her bed, using a wall as support.

She lay down on the bed and closed her eyes.

She wanted to forget everything.

"Please make me forget everything. Please make this a nightmare. I hope that when I wake up, everything will be back to normal."

---

Two days passed.

Sophia was in bed. She has had a high fever for the last two days.

Her mother and brother are looking after her.

When she woke up, her mother was sitting beside her.

"Sophia, how are you feeling right now?"

She blinked a couple of times to clear her vision. Her head was throbbing. She hissed as she tried to sit up.

Her mother helped her sit up. Sophia looked at her mother and said,

"I'm fine, mom."

Her mother reached for her forehead to check her temperature.

"You still have a fever."

Sophia closed her eyes as she leaned against the pillow behind her.

"I'll be fine. Don't worry."

Her mother prepared porridge for her and fed her. She smiled at her mother lightly.

"You are the best mother in this world."

"It's because my children are the best."

She chuckled but coughed. She glanced around and asked,

"Where is my brother, mom?"

"Your brother is in the pack house. Alpha called him today and asked him to come back to work. After the royal announcement, every official has gotten very busy."

Sophia frowned as she asked,

"Royal Announcement?"

Her mother wiped her mouth with a warm towel and replied,

"You were sick; that was why you didn't know about it. Alpha has announced that he will get engaged this weekend."

Sophia's eyes widened. Everything returned to her like a shot of bullet.

She immediately held her forehead with her hands.

"What happened, Sophia?"

Her mother kept calling her, but she could not listen to her.

She was lost in pain. That man did not even take his time before announcing it.

Sophia could not see anything in front of her. Everything was falling apart right in front of her eyes.

The pain he caused in her heart was like poison, crushing her entire body.

"Did he ask brother about me?" she asked her mother.

Her mother calmed down when she saw her talking. "Yes, Alpha asked Abraham why you were not going back to the company. Your brother informed him about your fever."

"Where is my phone, mom?" she asked, beginning to look for it.

Her mother immediately stood up from the edge of the bed, opened the drawer of the nightstand, and handed her phone to her.

"Your brother set the phone to silent mode because you were sick and could not receive any calls."

"I'm okay, mom. I will come downstairs after I take a shower."

"But you still have a fever."

"It's okay. I'm fine."

Her mother thought she needed some fresh air, so she agreed and left the room.

As soon as her mother left, she unlocked her phone and saw a bunch of missed calls.

Sara and Nolan called her a few times, but then they stopped. They might have called Abraham directly to inquire about her.

Her eyes froze on a message from the man she wished to forget.

"When your fever goes down, come see me."