

Chapter 28

In order to refocus my attention on my desk, I ignored my internal thoughts. Who would look at me? I was overthinking.

It came to my attention that a few folders were being placed on the desk. The file was a handwritten one, as I discovered when I grabbed it. The first step was to jot it down on the computer, and then I had to print it out.

While I waited for Lily to send someone to my cabin, I put the file back in its original location.

I was feeling bored, so I started to chat in our group. Sara was active. She immediately asked me how everything was going on. When I told her that I got a private cabin for myself, she urged me to send selfies to her.

I chuckled and clicked a few selfies of me while sitting in the head chair. Then I walked to the bookshelf, where a few books related to business were arranged. I clicked a selfie there, too.

I sent them to our group. Sara said she was very happy for me.

She reminded me to return Bryan's jacket to him. I said I would do that before leaving the office.

After some time, a man knocked on my cabin's door.

"Please, come in," I said.

An unknown young woman entered the room. As soon as I saw her, I stood up since I had the impression that she was a senior.

"Don't worry about it. Take a seat. I am Selena Parker. I came here to train you in some work," she said, walking to my desk.

I sat down on my chair, and she stood behind my chair.

She showed me many things on the computer. She told me the locations of Alpha's schedules and where to set up files. Basically, it was about remembering different things. But some of the folders were hidden, and only a few people knew about them. She was one of them.

Because, if anyone were to learn about Alpha's daily routine, they would immediately begin to sell it to other people so that they could profit from being able to use it.

There were so many new things I learned from Selena. She looked to be in her late thirties. It seemed as though she had been working at this company for quite some time.

After taking a ten-minute break, she resumed her training for me and continued to work on me. With our attention fixed on the screen, we both sat down on two chairs.

"Thank you, Miss." I showed my gratitude with a small smile after the training.

She did not look like an extroverted person. But she smiled back at me and said,

"You got a big position at a really young age. Don't disappoint anyone, and try your best."

"Means a lot."

Selena nodded her head and left my cabin. I sighed in tiredness.

I walked out of the cabin and set out on foot in the direction of the canteen.

Everyone stared at me as if I were a new animal in a zoo.

Avoiding their gazes, I proceeded to place an order for lunch and ordered something.

It was impossible for me to attend my university today. I was forced to miss my classes because the training season lasted for such a long time. However, given that I would be able to return here tomorrow after my university time, I would be able to handle everything.

"Are you the new girl that Alpha himself interviewed?"

I turned around and saw a few women. I gave them a slight nod of my head.

"What did he ask you?"

"Nothing much." I replied and turned to receive my order when I saw the waiter had placed my order on the counter.

"Just because you got a higher position, don't be so arrogant. We have been working here for years." Another woman told me.

I frowned at her. "When did I say something like that?"

"No, you did not. However, we decided to give you a heads-up in advance."

"Thank you for letting me know, sisters." I said it to them with a smile.

My smile froze them. Their expectation was that I would argue with them. However, they were defeated before they could even begin combat.

I sat at a table and had my lunch alone. I noticed Lily talking with some women while having lunch at her table.

After eating, I went back to my cabin. I had just begun to look at my schedule when I received a call on the telephone that was located at the office desk.

I received it. Lily's voice came from inside the phone.

"I put some files on your desk. Work on it. As for your first day, I have no doubt that it will be a simple task."

"Okay."

I looked at the paperwork that was sitting on my desk once I had finished hanging up the phone. There were many. Maybe it would take me almost the whole time in the office.

I glanced at the brown bag and stood up. I thought of giving him his jacket first, then returned here to start my work.

I walked out of my office and made a left turn. I started to make my way towards the next door. It dawned on me that Bryan's cabin was practically next to mine. But it was so large that I had to walk for a while to reach his door.

I knocked on the door and waited for his permission.

"Come in."

As soon as I heard him, I opened the door. I looked at the desk when I had finished closing the door behind me. There was no one there, which surprised me. Didn't I hear his voice from inside? Then, where was he?

Just as I was about to look around for Bryan, I heard his deep voice.

"Who are you searching for here?"

I turned my head and saw that he was smoking while seated on the couch.

The sunlight of this winter could not illuminate the room. The lights over the side where he was sitting were off. So I could not realize that he was sitting there, even though I could feel his scent in the room.

I avoided his gaze and walked to him. I did not want to see his appearance either. I was trying to avoid it totally.

"This is your suit jacket. I came to return it to you." I uttered the words and extended my hand to hand over the bag to him.

Before I could leave the grip on the bag, he grabbed the bag and pulled it to him.

My heart skipped a beat as I stumbled, and my body lost its balance.

My eyes widened when I directly fell on his lap.
